Failure to State a Claim. Tulalip Tribes, a native tribe in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Tulalip Tribes’ proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Tulalip Tribes filed its original complaint on May 17, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Tulalip Tribes v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45589-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Tulalip Tribes knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Tulalip Tribes’ RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Tulalip Tribes’ request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Tulalip Tribes’ public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Tulalip Tribes sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 17, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Tulalip Tribes, a native tribe in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

521. City of Kent v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45590-DAP: Plaintiff Kent City, Washington

Kent City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Kent City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Kent City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Kent City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Kent City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Kent City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Kent City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 17, 2018, as well as on May 28, 2019 and January 12, 2021. See City of Kent v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45590-DAP, ECF Nos. 26, 28, 29. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Kent City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Kent City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Kent City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Kent City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information

[she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Kent City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.09% market share for Kent City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kent City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Kent City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.30% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kent City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Kent City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Kent City, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Kent City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Kent City filed its original complaint on May 17, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Kent v. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Kent City, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

522. City of Paducah, Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45592-DAP: Plaintiff Paducah City, Kentucky

Paducah City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Paducah City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Paducah City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Paducah City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Paducah City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Paducah City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Paducah City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Paducah, Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45592-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Paducah City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Paducah City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Paducah City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Paducah City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Paducah City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Paducah City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Paducah City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Paducah City filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018. See City of Paducah, Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45592-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Paducah City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Paducah City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Paducah City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Paducah City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Paducah City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kentucky law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Paducah City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kentucky law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Paducah City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Paducah City filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Paducah, Kentucky v. Paducah City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Paducah City, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

523. County of Ballard Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45593-DAP: Plaintiff Ballard County, Kentucky

Ballard County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ballard County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ballard County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ballard County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Ballard County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ballard County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ballard County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Ballard County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Ballard County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ballard County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ballard County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Ballard County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.41% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ballard County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Ballard County filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018. See County of Ballard Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45593-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Ballard County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ballard County, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Harrisburg City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Harrisburg City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Harrisburg City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Harrisburg City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Harrisburg City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Harrisburg City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Harrisburg City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 18, 2018. See City of Harrisburg, Illinois v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45594-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Harrisburg City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Harrisburg City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Harrisburg City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Harrisburg City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Harrisburg City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Harrisburg City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Harrisburg City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Harrisburg City filed its original complaint on May 18, 2018. See City of Harrisburg, Illinois v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45594-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Harrisburg City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Harrisburg City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Harrisburg City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Harrisburg City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Harrisburg City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Harrisburg City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Harrisburg City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Harrisburg City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Harrisburg City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Harrisburg City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Harrisburg City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Harrisburg City’s potential claims against them. Harrisburg City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Harrisburg City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Harrisburg City, a municipality in Illinois, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Harrisburg City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Harrisburg City filed its original complaint on May 18, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Harrisburg, Illinois v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45594-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Harrisburg City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Harrisburg City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Harrisburg City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Harrisburg City, a municipality in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

525. Town of Salisbury v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45595-DAP: Plaintiff Salisbury Town, Massachusetts

Salisbury Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Salisbury Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Salisbury Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Salisbury Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Salisbury Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Salisbury Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Salisbury Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 18, 2018. See Town Of Salisbury v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45595-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Salisbury Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Salisbury Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Salisbury Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Salisbury Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Salisbury Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Salisbury Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Salisbury Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Salisbury Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Salisbury Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Salisbury Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.13% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Salisbury Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Salisbury Town filed its original complaint on May 18, 2018. See Town Of Salisbury v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45595-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Salisbury Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Salisbury Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Salisbury Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Salisbury Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Salisbury Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Salisbury Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Salisbury Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Salisbury Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Salisbury Town filed its original complaint on May 18, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town Of Salisbury v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45595-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Salisbury Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Salisbury Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Salisbury Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Salisbury Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Salisbury Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 18, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Salisbury Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

526. City of Everett v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45596-DAP: Plaintiff Everett City, Massachusetts

Everett City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Everett City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Everett City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Everett City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Everett City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Everett City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Everett City amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 18, 2018. See City of Everett v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45596-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Everett City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Everett City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Everett City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Everett City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Everett City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Everett City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Everett City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Everett City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Everett City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.09% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Everett City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Everett City filed its original complaint on April 5, 2018. See City of Everett v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45596-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Everett City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232, 5455. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Everett City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Everett City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Everett City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Everett City filed its original complaint on April 5, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Everett v. Everett City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Everett City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on April 5, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Everett City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

527. Monroe County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45597-DAP: Plaintiff Monroe County, Ohio

Monroe County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Monroe County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Monroe County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Monroe County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Monroe County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Monroe County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Monroe County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 18, 2018. See Monroe County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45597-DAP, ECF No. 22. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Monroe County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Monroe County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Monroe County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Monroe County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

low to support a finding of good cause for Monroe County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Monroe County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Monroe County, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Monroe County is a plaintiff in Ohio. Monroe County's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Monroe County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Monroe County filed its original complaint on May 3, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Monroe County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45597-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Monroe County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Monroe County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Monroe County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Monroe County, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

528. City of Princeton, Illinois v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45599-DAP: Plaintiff Princeton City, Illinois

Princeton City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Princeton City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Princeton City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Princeton City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Princeton City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Princeton City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Princeton City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 18, 2018. See City of Princeton, Illinois v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45599-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Princeton City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Princeton City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Princeton City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Princeton City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Princeton City’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Princeton City cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Princeton City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.03% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Princeton City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Princeton City filed its original complaint on May 5, 2018. See City of Princeton, Illinois v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45599-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Princeton City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232, 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Princeton City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Princeton City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Princeton City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Princeton City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Princeton City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Princeton City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Princeton City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Princeton City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Princeton City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Princeton City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Princeton City's potential claims against them. Princeton City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Princeton City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Princeton City, a municipality in Illinois, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Princeton City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Princeton City filed its original complaint on May 5, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Princeton, Illinois v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45599-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Princeton City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Princeton City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Princeton City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Princeton City, a municipality in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

529. Forsyth County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45605-DAP: Plaintiff Forsyth County, North Carolina

Forsyth County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Forsyth County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Forsyth County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Forsyth County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Forsyth County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Forsyth County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Forsyth County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 23, 2018. See Forsyth County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45605-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Forsyth County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Forsyth County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Forsyth County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Forsyth County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Forsyth County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Forsyth County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Forsyth County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Forsyth County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for Forsyth County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Forsyth County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Forsyth County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.26% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Forsyth County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Forsyth County filed its original complaint on April 27, 2018, but waited until September 17, 2018 to implement a litigation hold. See Forsyth County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45605-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 17, 2018). Forsyth County's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232, 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Forsyth County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Forsyth County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Forsyth County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Forsyth County filed its original complaint on April 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Forsyth County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45605-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Forsyth County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Forsyth County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Forsyth County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Forsyth County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

530. People of the State of Illinois et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45606-DAP: Plaintiff Lee County, Illinois

Lee County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lee County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lee County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lee County amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45606-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lee County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lee County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lee County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lee County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Lee County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Lee County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.09% market share for Lee County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lee County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Lee County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.29% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lee County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lee County filed its original complaint on May 23, 2018. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45606-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lee County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232, 5455. Litigating Lee County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lee County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lee County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lee County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lee County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lee County, a municipality in Illinois, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lee County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lee County, a municipality in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

531. County of Sacramento v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45608-DAP: Plaintiff Sacramento County, California

Sacramento County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sacramento County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sacramento County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sacramento County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sacramento County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sacramento County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sacramento County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 30, 2018. See County of Sacramento v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45608-DAP, ECF No. 14. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sacramento County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sacramento County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Sacramento County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sacramento County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Gustafson Decl. (0.14% market share for Sacramento County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sacramento County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Sacramento County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Sacramento County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Sacramento County began receiving those services on July 12, 2007. See id. Inasmuch as Sacramento County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Sacramento County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Sacramento County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to State a Claim. Sacramento County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sacramento County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al.*, Case No. 1:18-op-45608-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sacramento County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Sacramento County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sacramento County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

532. County of McCracken Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45611-DAP: Plaintiff Mccracken County, Kentucky

Mccracken County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mccracken County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mccracken County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mccracken County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Mccracken County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Mccracken County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Mccracken County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL, as well as on March 10, 2023. See County of McCracken Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45611-DAP, ECF Nos. 2, 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Mccracken County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Mccracken County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Mccracken County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Mccracken County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Mccracken County filed its original complaint on May 29, 2018. See County of McCracken Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45611-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Mccracken County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232, 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Mccracken County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Mccracken County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Mccracken County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Mccracken County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kentucky law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Mccracken County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kentucky law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Mccracken County, a municipality in Kentucky, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Mccracken County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Mccracken County filed its original complaint on May 29, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of McCracken Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45611-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Mccracken County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Mccracken County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Mccracken County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Mccracken County, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

533. Clallam County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45612-DAP: Plaintiff Clallam County, Washington

Clallam County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Clallam County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Clallam County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Clallam County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Clallam County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Clallam County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Clallam County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 30, 2018, as well as on May 28, 2019, and February 11, 2021. See Clallam County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45612-DAP, ECF Nos. 26, 30, 33. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Clallam County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Clallam County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Clallam County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Clallam County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Clallam County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.48% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Clallam County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Clallam County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Clallam County, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Clallam County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Clallam County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Clallam County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45612-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Clallam County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Clallam County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Clallam County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Clallam County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Clallam County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 8, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Clallam County, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

534. County of San Diego et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al.,
Case No. 1:18-op-45613-DAP: Plaintiff San Diego County, California

San Diego County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. San Diego County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. San Diego County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, San Diego County's motion should be denied due to futility, as San Diego County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. San Diego County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, San Diego County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 30, 2018. See County of San Diego et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45613-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, San Diego County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. San Diego County's deadline to amend was in 2019. San Diego County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. San Diego County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. San Diego County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey &

Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. San Diego County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. San Diego County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. San Diego County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified San Diego County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and San Diego County began receiving those services on June 6, 2007. See id. Inasmuch as San Diego County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), San Diego County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. San Diego County’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to State a Claim. San Diego County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for San Diego County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. San Diego County filed its original complaint on May 7, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of San Diego et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45613-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that San Diego County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. San Diego County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. San Diego County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. San Diego County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

535. St. Clair County, Alabama v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45614-DAP: Plaintiff St. Clair County, Alabama

St. Clair County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Clair County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Clair County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. Clair County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Clair County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. St. Clair County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, St. Clair County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on May 30, 2018. See St. Clair County, Alabama v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45614-DAP, ECF No. 18. St. Clair County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, St. Clair County elected not to do so. Instead, St. Clair County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. St. Clair County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459

(affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to St. Clair County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.22% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Clair County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. St. Clair County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2018. See St. Clair County, Alabama v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45614-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, St. Clair County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232, 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating St. Clair County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of St. Clair County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by St.

Clair County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and St. Clair County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But St. Clair County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. St. Clair County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for St. Clair County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. St. Clair County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See St. Clair County, Alabama v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45614-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that St. Clair County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. St. Clair County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. St. Clair County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. St. Clair County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because St. Clair County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 8, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. Clair County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. Clair County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

536. Bergen County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45616-DAP: Plaintiff Bergen County, New Jersey

Bergen County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bergen County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bergen County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bergen County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Bergen County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bergen County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bergen County filed its original complaint on May 4, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on May 30, 2018. See Bergen County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45616-DAP, ECF No. 4. Bergen County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bergen County elected not to do so. Instead, Bergen County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bergen County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Bergen County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Bergen County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bergen County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Bergen County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Bergen County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Bergen County began receiving those services on January 19, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Bergen County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Bergen County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Bergen County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Bergen County filed its original complaint on May 4, 2018, but waited until October 22, 2018 to implement a litigation hold. See Bergen County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45616-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: October 22, 2018). Bergen County's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232, 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Jersey law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bergen County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Jersey law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bergen County, a municipality in New Jersey, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bergen County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bergen County filed its original complaint on May 4, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Bergen County v. III.B.4, above. Bergen County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bergen County, a municipality in New Jersey, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

537. City of Frostburg v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45617-DAP: Plaintiff Frostburg City, Maryland

Frostburg City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Frostburg City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Frostburg City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Frostburg City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Frostburg City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Frostburg City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Frostburg City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Frostburg City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Frostburg City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maryland law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Frostburg City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maryland law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Maryland, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Frostburg City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Frostburg City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 11, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Frostburg City, a municipality in Maryland, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

538. County of Mariposa, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45618-DAP: Plaintiff Mariposa County, California

Mariposa County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mariposa County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mariposa County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mariposa County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Mariposa County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Mariposa County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Mariposa County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 30, 2018. See County of Mariposa, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45618-DAP, ECF No. 17. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Mariposa County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Mariposa County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Mariposa County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Mariposa County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Mariposa County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Mariposa County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Mariposa County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Mariposa County filed its original complaint on May 7, 2018, but waited until September 12, 2018 to implement a litigation hold. See County of Mariposa, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45618-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 12, 2018). Mariposa County's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232, 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Mariposa County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Mariposa County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Mariposa County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Mariposa County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Mariposa County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Mariposa County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Mariposa County's potential claims against them. Mariposa County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6

(denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Failure to State a Claim. Mariposa County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Mariposa County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Mariposa County filed its original complaint on May 7, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Mariposa, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45618-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Mariposa County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Mariposa County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Mariposa County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Mariposa County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

539. County of Tuolumne, et al. v. Amerisource Bergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45619-DAP: Plaintiff Tuolumne County, California

Tuolumne County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Tuolumne County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Tuolumne County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Tuolumne County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Tuolumne County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Tuolumne County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Tuolumne County amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 30, 2018. See County of Tuolumne, et al. v. Amerisource Bergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45619-DAP, ECF No. 18. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Tuolumne County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Tuolumne County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Tuolumne County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Tuolumne County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Tuolumne County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey &

Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Tuolumne County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Tuolumne County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Tuolumne County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.24% market share for Tuolumne County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Tuolumne County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Tuolumne County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Tuolumne County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Tuolumne County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Tuolumne, et al. v. Amerisource Bergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45619-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Tuolumne County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Tuolumne County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Tuolumne County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Tuolumne County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

540. City of Alma, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45620-DAP: Plaintiff Alma City, Georgia

Alma City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Alma City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Alma City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Alma City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Alma City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Alma City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Alma City filed its original complaint on May 11, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on May 31, 2018. See City of Alma, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45620-DAP, ECF No. 4. Alma City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Alma City elected not to do so. Instead, Alma City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Alma City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Alma City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Alma City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Alma City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

a finding of good cause for Alma City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Alma City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Alma City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Alma City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Alma City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Alma City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Alma City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Alma City's potential claims against them. Alma City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Alma City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Alma City, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Alma City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Alma City filed its original complaint on May 11, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Alma, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45620-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Alma City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 11, 2022. Alma City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Alma City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Alma City, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

541. City of Hagerstown, Maryland v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45622-DAP: Plaintiff Hagerstown City, Maryland

Hagerstown City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hagerstown City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hagerstown City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hagerstown City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Hagerstown City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hagerstown City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hagerstown City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 31, 2018. See City of Hagerstown, Maryland v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45622-DAP, ECF Nos. 6, 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hagerstown City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Hagerstown City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Hagerstown City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hagerstown City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Hagerstown City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Hagerstown City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Hagerstown City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See,

e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maryland law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hagerstown City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maryland law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Hagerstown City, a municipality in Maryland, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Hagerstown City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Hagerstown City filed its original complaint on May 11, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Hagerstown, Maryland v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45622-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Hagerstown City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Hagerstown City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Hagerstown City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Maryland, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Hagerstown City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Hagerstown City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 11, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hagerstown City, a municipality in Maryland, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

542. City of Cumberland, Maryland v AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45624-DAP: Plaintiff Cumberland City, Maryland

Cumberland City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cumberland City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cumberland City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cumberland City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Cumberland City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cumberland City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Cumberland City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 31, 2018. See City of Cumberland, Maryland v AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45624-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cumberland City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Cumberland City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Cumberland City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cumberland City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879

(affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Cumberland City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Cumberland City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Cumberland City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Cumberland City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Cumberland City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cumberland City to add dispensing claims against

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maryland law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Cumberland City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maryland law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Cumberland City, a municipality in Maryland, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Cumberland City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Cumberland City filed its original complaint on May 11, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Cumberland, Maryland v AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45624-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Cumberland City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Cumberland City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. Cumberland City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Maryland, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Cumberland City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Cumberland City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 11, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Cumberland City, a municipality in Maryland, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

543. County of Mono v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45626-DAP: Plaintiff Mono County, California

Mono County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mono County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mono County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mono County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Mono County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Mono County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Mono County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 1, 2018. See County of Mono v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45626-DAP, ECF No. 14. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Mono County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Mono County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Mono County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Mono County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Mono County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Mono County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Mono County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See,

e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to State a Claim. Mono County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Mono County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Mono County filed its original complaint on May 9, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Mono v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45626-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Mono County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Mono County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF

No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Mono County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

544. County of Butte v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45627-DAP: Plaintiff Butte County, California

(0.11% market share for Imperial County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Imperial County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Imperial County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Imperial County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Imperial County began receiving those services on January 3, 2018. See id. Inasmuch as Imperial County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Imperial County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than six years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Imperial County’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to State a Claim. Imperial County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Imperial County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Imperial County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Imperial et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45631-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Imperial County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Imperial County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Imperial County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Imperial County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

549. City of Portland, Oregon v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45633-DAP: Plaintiff Portland City, Oregon

Portland City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Portland City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Portland City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Portland City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Portland City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Portland City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Portland City amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See City of Portland, Oregon v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45633-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Portland City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Portland City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Portland City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Portland City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Portland City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Portland City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Portland City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Portland City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit C. That contract notified Portland City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Portland City began receiving those services on July 1, 2016. See id. Inasmuch as Portland City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Portland City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct eight years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Portland City’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Portland City’s agreement with Express Scripts, Inc., also includes a binding arbitration provision. See Achter Decl., ¶ 16, Exhibit C. This provision requires that all claims arising from the agreement or relating to the performance or interpretation of the agreement be brought in arbitration and forecloses Portland City from seeking redress against Express Scripts, Inc., in the MDL. Id. As the Sixth Circuit held, “[w]here the agreement contains an arbitration clause, the court should apply a presumption of arbitrability, resolve any doubts in favor of arbitration, and should not deny an order to arbitrate unless it may be said with positive assurance that the arbitration clause is not susceptible of an interpretation that covers the asserted dispute.” Int’l Union v. Cummins, Inc., 434 F.3d 478, 485 (6th Cir. 2006). The MDL does not change this fundamental rule of law. In re Polyurethane Foam Antitrust Litig., 998 F. Supp. 2d 625, 636 (N.D. Ohio 2014) (“Simply put, an MDL’s efficient qualities cannot alone override a party’s agreement to arbitrate.”). Courts routinely find that leave for amend would be futile where an arbitration provision covers the claims at issue. Crossville Med. Oncology, P.C. v. Glenwood Sys., LLC, 310 F. App’x 858, 860 (6th Cir. 2009) (denying motion to amend complaint where the parties’ agreement contained an arbitration clause such that “amendment therefore would have been futile”); see also Hickey v. Smith, 2024 WL 912041, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 4, 2024) (“Courts have recognized that where the court has determined that an arbitration clause applies to a claim, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the claim and any amendment would be futile.”) (internal citation omitted) (collecting cases).

Here, Portland City seeks to add claims arising from and related to its agreement with Express Scripts, Inc., to provide PBM services, including utilization management and formulary development. See, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845. These claims are subject to binding arbitration and cannot be litigated in this MDL. Portland City’s motion for leave to add claims against Express Scripts entities must therefore be denied as futile.

Additionally, Portland City’s contract with Express Scripts, Inc., includes a mandatory mediation provision. See Achter Decl., ¶ 19, Exhibit C. This provision requires that all claims arising from the agreement or relating to the performance or interpretation of the agreement be mediated (or proceed through other informal dispute resolution procedures) before any party may commence arbitration or litigation. Id. This provision thus forecloses Portland City from seeking redress against Express Scripts, Inc., in the MDL. The contractual obligation to mediate claims prior to filing suit is binding and courts routinely hold parties to such agreements. See CJ Consultants, 2022 WL 4354265, at *7 (granting defendant’s motion to dismiss complaint in order to enforce the informal resolution/mediation procedures in the parties’ contract); see also Fisher, 276 F. Supp. 2d at 894 (“[F]ederal policy favors arbitration in a broad sense, and mediation surely falls under the preference for non-judicial dispute resolution. Thus, agreements like [the one at issue] are to be encouraged. Accordingly, the court finds that plaintiff[’s] agreement to mediate any claim before filing it in court is binding under the FAA.”). Because Portland City entered into an agreement to mediate or pursue other dispute resolution prior to bringing suit against Express Scripts, Inc., its proposed claims should not proceed in this Court.

Finally, Portland City’s contract with Express Scripts, Inc., also includes a forum selection clause requiring that any disputes arising under the agreement or out of work performed under the agreement be commenced in the Multnomah County Circuit Court or United States District Court for the District of Oregon. See Achter Decl., ¶ 20, Exhibit C. This forum selection clause is “mandatory” and “valid on its face,” and as such the Court must uphold the forum selection clause absent a strong showing that it should be set aside. See C&S Outdoor Power Equip., Inc. v. Odes Indus. LLC, 2019 WL 4197608, at *4 (W.D. Tenn. Sept. 4, 2019) (citing Wong v. PartyGaming Ltd., 589 F.3d 821, 828 (6th Cir. 2009)). This Court should therefore deny Portland City’s motion for leave to amend its complaint to add claims against Express Scripts, Inc., as futile because those claims are subject to a motion to dismiss under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) for failure to file suit in the selected fora as required by the parties’ contract. See Smith v. Aegon Companies Pension Plan, 769 F.3d 922, 934 (6th Cir. 2014) (affirming dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) for violation of forum selection clause).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Oregon law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Portland City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Oregon law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Portland City, a municipality in Oregon, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Portland City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Portland City filed its original complaint on May 10, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Portland, Oregon v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45633-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Portland City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Portland City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Portland City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Portland City, a municipality in Oregon, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

550. Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP: Plaintiff Bridgeport city, Alabama

Bridgeport city’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bridgeport city failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bridgeport city also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bridgeport city’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Bridgeport city does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bridgeport city was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bridgeport city amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bridgeport city declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Bridgeport city’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Bridgeport city waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bridgeport city’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Bridgeport city’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Bridgeport city). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bridgeport city to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Bridgeport city filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Bridgeport city never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232, 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Bridgeport city’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Bridgeport city’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Bridgeport city's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Bridgeport city therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Bridgeport city failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Bridgeport city's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Bridgeport city of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Bridgeport city refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Bridgeport city's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Bridgeport city's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Bridgeport city's potential claims against them. Bridgeport city's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bridgeport city's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bridgeport city, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bridgeport city's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bridgeport city filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Bridgeport city knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Bridgeport city's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bridgeport city's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Bridgeport city's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Bridgeport city sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 1, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See

Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bridgeport city, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

551. Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP: Plaintiff Geraldine Town, Alabama

Geraldine Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Geraldine Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Geraldine Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet. Moreover, Geraldine Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Geraldine Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Geraldine Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Geraldine Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Geraldine Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Geraldine Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Geraldine Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Geraldine Town filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Geraldine Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Geraldine Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Geraldine Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Geraldine Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Geraldine Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Geraldine Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Geraldine Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Geraldine Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Geraldine Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Geraldine Town's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Geraldine Town's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Geraldine Town's potential claims against them. Geraldine Town's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Geraldine Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791.

Failure to State a Claim. Geraldine Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Geraldine Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Geraldine Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Geraldine Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 1, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Geraldine Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

552. Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP: Plaintiff Henagar City, Alabama

Henagar City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Henagar City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Henagar City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Henagar City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Henagar City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Henagar City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Henagar City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Henagar City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Henagar City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Henagar City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Henagar City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Henagar City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.17% market share for Henagar City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Henagar City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Henagar City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Henagar City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Henagar City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Henagar City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Henagar City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Henagar City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Henagar City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Henagar City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Henagar City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Henagar City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Henagar City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Henagar City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Henagar City’s potential claims against them. Henagar City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Henagar City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Henagar City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Henagar City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Henagar City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Henagar City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Henagar City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Henagar City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Henagar City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Henagar City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 1, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Henagar City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

553. Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP: Plaintiff Jackson County, Alabama

Jackson County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Jackson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Jackson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Jackson County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Jackson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Jackson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover,

Jackson County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Jackson County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Jackson County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Jackson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Jackson County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Jackson County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Jackson County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Jackson County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

a finding of good cause for Jackson County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Jackson County filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Jackson County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Jackson County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Jackson County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Jackson County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Jackson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Jackson County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Jackson County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Jackson County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Jackson County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Jackson County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Jackson County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Jackson County’s potential claims against them. Jackson County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Jackson County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Jackson County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Jackson County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Jackson County filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Jackson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Jackson County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Jackson County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Jackson County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Jackson County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 1, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Jackson County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Jackson County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

554. Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP: Plaintiff New Hope City, Alabama

New Hope City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. New Hope City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. New Hope City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, New Hope City's motion should be denied due to futility, as New Hope City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. New Hope City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, New Hope City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, New Hope City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. New Hope City's deadline to amend was in 2019. New Hope City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. New Hope City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to New Hope City's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, New Hope City cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to New Hope City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.38% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for New Hope City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. New Hope City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, New Hope City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating New Hope City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of New Hope City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by New Hope City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and New Hope City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, New Hope City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to New Hope City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified New Hope City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but New Hope City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, New Hope City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. New Hope City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against New Hope City’s potential claims against them. New Hope City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But New Hope City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. New Hope City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for New Hope City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. New Hope City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that New Hope City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. New Hope City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. New Hope City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. New Hope City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because New Hope City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 1, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. New Hope City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

555. Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP: Plaintiff Scottsboro City, Alabama

Scottsboro City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Scottsboro City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Scottsboro City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Scottsboro City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Scottsboro City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Scottsboro City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Scottsboro City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Scottsboro City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Scottsboro City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Scottsboro City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Scottsboro City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Scottsboro City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Scottsboro City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Scottsboro City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Scottsboro City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Scottsboro City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Scottsboro City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Scottsboro City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Scottsboro City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Scottsboro City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Scottsboro City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Scottsboro City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Scottsboro City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Scottsboro City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Scottsboro City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Scottsboro City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Scottsboro City’s potential claims against them. Scottsboro City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Scottsboro City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Scottsboro City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Scottsboro City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Scottsboro City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Scottsboro City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Scottsboro City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Scottsboro City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Scottsboro City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Scottsboro City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 1, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Scottsboro City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

556. Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP: Plaintiff Woodville Town, Alabama

Woodville Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Woodville Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Woodville Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Woodville Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Woodville Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Woodville Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Woodville Town amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Woodville Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Woodville Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Woodville Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Woodville Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Woodville Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Woodville Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Woodville Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Woodville Town filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Woodville Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Woodville Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Woodville Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Woodville Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Woodville Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Woodville Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Woodville Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Woodville Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Woodville Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Woodville Town's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Woodville Town's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Woodville Town's potential claims against them. Woodville Town's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Woodville Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Woodville Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Woodville Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Woodville Town filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45634-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Woodville Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Woodville Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Woodville Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Woodville Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Woodville Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 1, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See

Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Woodville Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

557. City of Mayfield Heights v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45635-DAP: Plaintiff Mayfield Heights City, Ohio

Mayfield Heights City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mayfield Heights City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mayfield Heights City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mayfield Heights City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Mayfield Heights City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Mayfield Heights City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Mayfield Heights City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Mayfield Heights v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45635-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Mayfield Heights City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Mayfield Heights City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Mayfield Heights City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Mayfield Heights City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Mayfield Heights City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.06% market share for Mayfield Heights City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Mayfield Heights City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Mayfield Heights City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018. See City of Mayfield Heights v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45635-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Mayfield Heights City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos.

232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Mayfield Heights City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Mayfield Heights City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Mayfield Heights City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Mayfield Heights City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Mayfield Heights City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Mayfield Heights City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Mayfield Heights City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Mayfield Heights City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Mayfield Heights City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Mayfield Heights City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Mayfield Heights City’s potential claims against them. Mayfield Heights City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017

WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Mayfield Heights City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Mayfield Heights City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Mayfield Heights City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Mayfield Heights City’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Mayfield Heights City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Mayfield Heights City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Mayfield Heights v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45635-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Mayfield Heights City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Mayfield Heights City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Mayfield Heights City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Mayfield Heights City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

558. City of Lyndhurst v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45636-DAP: Plaintiff Lyndhurst City, Ohio

Lyndhurst City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lyndhurst City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lyndhurst City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lyndhurst City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lyndhurst City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lyndhurst City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lyndhurst City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Lyndhurst v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45636-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lyndhurst City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lyndhurst City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Lyndhurst City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lyndhurst City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Lyndhurst City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Lyndhurst City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lyndhurst City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lyndhurst City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018. See City of Lyndhurst v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45636-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lyndhurst City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). The PBMs are prejudiced by Lyndhurst City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lyndhurst City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Lyndhurst City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Lyndhurst City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Lyndhurst City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Lyndhurst City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Lyndhurst City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Lyndhurst City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Lyndhurst City’s potential claims against them. Lyndhurst City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lyndhurst City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lyndhurst City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Lyndhurst City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Lyndhurst City’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lyndhurst City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lyndhurst City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Lyndhurst v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45636-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lyndhurst City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Lyndhurst City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period.

ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lyndhurst City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lyndhurst City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

559. City of Wickliffe v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45637-DAP: Plaintiff Wickliffe City, Ohio

Wickliffe City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wickliffe City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wickliffe City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wickliffe City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wickliffe City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wickliffe City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Wickliffe City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Wickliffe City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wickliffe City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wickliffe City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018. See City of Wickliffe v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45637-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wickliffe City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Wickliffe City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wickliffe City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wickliffe City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wickliffe City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wickliffe City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wickliffe City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Wickliffe City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Wickliffe City's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Wickliffe City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Wickliffe City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Wickliffe v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45637-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Wickliffe City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Wickliffe City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Wickliffe City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wickliffe City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

560. City of St. Marys, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45638-DAP: Plaintiff St. Marys City, Ohio

St. Marys City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Marys City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Marys City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. Marys City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Marys City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. St. Marys City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, St. Marys City amended its complaint on March 16, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of St. Marys, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45638-DAP, ECF No. 22. Unlike many other plaintiffs, St. Marys City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. St. Marys City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. St. Marys City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. St. Marys City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to St. Marys City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.28% market share for St. Marys City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Marys City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to St. Marys City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.45% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Marys City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. St. Marys City filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018. See City of St. Marys, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45638-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, St. Marys City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating St. Marys City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of St. Marys City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. Marys City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

561. County of Glenn v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45639-DAP: Plaintiff Glenn County, California

Glenn County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Glenn County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Glenn County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Glenn County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Glenn County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Moreover, Glenn County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Glenn v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45639-

Glenn County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Prior Notice Through Counsel. Glenn County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Glenn County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Glenn County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. 562. County of Sutter v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45640-DAP: Plaintiff Sutter County, California

Sutter County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sutter County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sutter County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sutter County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sutter County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Moreover, Sutter County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Sutter v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45640-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sutter County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sutter County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Sutter County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sutter County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sutter County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Sutter County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Sutter County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Sutter County began receiving those services on November 9, 2010. See id. Inasmuch as Sutter County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Sutter County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Sutter County’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Sutter County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sutter County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

563. County of Modoc v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45641-DAP: Plaintiff Modoc County, California

Modoc County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Modoc County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Modoc County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Modoc County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Modoc County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Moreover, Modoc County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Modoc v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45641-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Modoc County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Modoc County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Modoc County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Modoc County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she]

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Modoc County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Modoc County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Modoc County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Modoc County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Modoc County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2018, but waited until September 23, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—over a year later. See County of Modoc v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45641-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 23, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Modoc County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Modoc County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Modoc County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Modoc County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Modoc County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Modoc County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Modoc County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Modoc v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45641-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Modoc County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Modoc County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Modoc County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Modoc County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

564. County of Placer v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45642-DAP: Plaintiff Placer County, California

Placer County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Placer County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Placer County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Placer County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Placer County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Moreover, Placer County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Placer v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45642-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Placer County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Placer County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Placer County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Placer County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Placer County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Placer County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Placer County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Decl. (0.21% market share for Placer County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Placer County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Placer County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Placer County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Placer County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Placer v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45642-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Placer County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Placer County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Placer County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Placer County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

565. County of Merced, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45643-DAP: Plaintiff Merced County, California

Merced County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Merced County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Merced County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Merced County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Merced County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Merced County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Merced County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Merced, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45643-DAP, ECF No. 15. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Merced County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Merced County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Merced County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Merced County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Merced County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Merced County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Merced County began receiving those services on February 27, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Merced County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Merced County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Merced County’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to State a Claim. Merced County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Merced County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Merced County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

566. County of Fresno v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45644-DAP: Plaintiff Fresno County, California

Fresno County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fresno County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fresno County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fresno County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Fresno County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fresno County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Fresno County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Fresno v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45644-DAP, ECF No. 14. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Fresno County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Fresno County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Fresno County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Fresno County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Fresno County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.23% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Fresno County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Fresno County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Fresno County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Fresno County began receiving those services on January 1, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Fresno County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Fresno County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Fresno County filed its original complaint on May 9, 2018. See County of Fresno v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45644-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Fresno County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Fresno County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Fresno County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Fresno County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Fresno County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Fresno County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Fresno County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Fresno County filed its original complaint on May 9, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See County of Fresno v. Fresno County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Fresno County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

567. County of Calaveras, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45645-DAP: Plaintiff Calaveras County, California

Calaveras County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Calaveras County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Calaveras County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Calaveras County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Calaveras County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Calaveras County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Calaveras County amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Calaveras, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45645-DAP, ECF No. 20. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Calaveras County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Calaveras County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Calaveras County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Calaveras County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Calaveras County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Calaveras County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Calaveras County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Gustafson Decl. (0.50% market share for Calaveras County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Calaveras County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Calaveras County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Calaveras County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Calaveras County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Calaveras County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Calaveras County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Calaveras County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Calaveras County's potential claims against them. Calaveras County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Failure to State a Claim. Calaveras County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Calaveras County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Calaveras County filed its original complaint on May 9, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Calaveras, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45645-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Calaveras County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Calaveras County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Calaveras County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Calaveras County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

568. County of Inyo, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45646-DAP: Plaintiff Inyo County, California

Inyo County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Inyo County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Inyo County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Inyo County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Inyo County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Inyo County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Inyo County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Inyo, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45646-DAP, ECF No. 15. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Inyo County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Inyo County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Inyo County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Inyo County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Inyo County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. App’x at 1006

(affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Failure to State a Claim. Inyo County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Inyo County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Inyo County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

569. County of Madera, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45647-DAP: Plaintiff Madera County, California

Madera County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Madera County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Madera County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Madera County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Madera County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Madera County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Madera County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Madera, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45647-DAP, ECF No. 18. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Madera County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Madera County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Madera County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Madera County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Madera County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Madera County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Madera County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Madera County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.13% market share for Madera County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Madera County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Madera County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Madera County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Madera County filed its original complaint on May 9, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Madera, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45647-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Madera County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Madera County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Madera County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Madera County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

570. County of Yuba v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45648-DAP: Plaintiff Yuba County, California

Yuba County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Yuba County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Yuba County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Yuba County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Yuba County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Moreover, Yuba County amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Yuba v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45648-DAP, ECF No. 13. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Yuba County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Yuba County's deadline to amend was in 2019. (0.31% market share for Yuba County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Yuba County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Yuba County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. 571. County of Plumas v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45649-DAP: Plaintiff Plumas County, California

Plumas County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Plumas County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Plumas County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Plumas County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Plumas County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Plumas County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Plumas County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Plumas v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45649-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Plumas County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Plumas County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Plumas County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Plumas County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Plumas County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Plumas County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Plumas County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the "plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint"); Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Plumas County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Plumas County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Plumas County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Plumas County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Plumas County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Plumas County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Plumas County's potential claims against them. Plumas County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Failure to State a Claim. Plumas County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Plumas County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Plumas County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See County of Plumas v. Section III.B.4, above. Plumas County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Plumas County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

572. County of Trinity v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45650-DAP: Plaintiff Trinity County, California

Trinity County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Trinity County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Trinity County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Trinity County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Trinity County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Trinity County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

573. Allegany County, Maryland v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45652-DAP: Plaintiff Allegany County, Maryland

Allegany County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Allegany County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Allegany County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Allegany County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Allegany County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Allegany County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Allegany County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See Allegany County, Maryland v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45652-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Allegany County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Allegany County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Allegany County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Allegany County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Allegany County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Allegany County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Allegany County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Allegany County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Allegany County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maryland law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Allegany County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maryland law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Allegany County, a municipality in Maryland, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Allegany County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Allegany County filed its original complaint on May 11, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Allegany County, Maryland v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45652-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Allegany County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Allegany County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Allegany County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Maryland, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Allegany County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Allegany County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 11, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Allegany County, a municipality in Maryland, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

574. County of San Benito v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45653-DAP: Plaintiff San Benito County, California

San Benito County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. San Benito County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. San Benito County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, San Benito County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as San Benito County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. San Benito County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, San Benito County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of San Benito v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45653-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, San Benito County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. San Benito County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. San Benito County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. San Benito County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. San Benito County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. San Benito County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. San Benito County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Decl. (0.20% market share for San Benito County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for San Benito County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. San Benito County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified San Benito County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and San Benito County began receiving those services on January 4, 2017. See id. Inasmuch as San Benito County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), San Benito County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct seven years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. San Benito County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to State a Claim. San Benito County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for San Benito County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. San Benito County filed its original complaint on May 9, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants.

See County of San Benito v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45653-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that San Benito County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. San Benito County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. San Benito County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. San Benito County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

575. County of Mendocino v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45654-DAP: Plaintiff Mendocino County, California

Mendocino County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mendocino County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mendocino County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mendocino County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Mendocino County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Mendocino County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Mendocino County amended its complaint on March 4, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Mendocino v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45654-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Mendocino County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Mendocino County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Mendocino County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Mendocino County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Mendocino County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Mendocino County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Mendocino County began receiving those services on February 28, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Mendocino County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Mendocino County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Mendocino County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to State a Claim. Mendocino County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Mendocino County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

576. County of Del Norte v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45655-DAP: Plaintiff Del Norte County, California

Del Norte County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Del Norte County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Del Norte County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Del Norte County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Del Norte County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Del Norte County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Del Norte County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. Del Norte County’s request for leave to amend to add a

RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Del Norte County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

577. County of Contra Costa v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45656-DAP: Plaintiff Contra Costa County, California

Contra Costa County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Contra Costa County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Contra Costa County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Contra Costa County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Contra Costa County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Contra Costa County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Contra Costa County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 4, 2018. See County of Contra Costa v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45656-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Contra Costa County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Contra Costa County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Contra Costa County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Contra Costa County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Contra Costa County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Contra Costa County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Contra Costa County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Contra Costa County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.25% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Contra Costa County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Contra Costa County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Contra Costa County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Contra Costa County began receiving those services on July 2, 2007. See id. Inasmuch as Contra Costa County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Contra Costa County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Contra Costa County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Contra Costa County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Contra Costa County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Contra Costa County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Contra Costa County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Contra Costa County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Contra Costa County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Contra Costa County’s potential claims against them. Contra Costa County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Failure to State a Claim. Contra Costa County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Contra Costa County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Contra Costa County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Contra Costa v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45656-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Contra Costa County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Contra Costa County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Contra Costa County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Contra Costa County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

578. City of Winston-Salem v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45658-DAP: Plaintiff Winston-Salem City, North Carolina

Winston-Salem City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Winston-Salem City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Winston-Salem City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Winston-Salem City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Winston-Salem City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Winston-Salem City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Winston-Salem City amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 5, 2018. See City of Winston-Salem v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45658-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Winston-Salem City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Winston-Salem City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Winston-Salem City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Winston-Salem City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Winston-Salem City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Winston-Salem City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Winston-Salem City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Winston-Salem City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Winston-Salem City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Winston-Salem City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Winston-Salem City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Winston-Salem City began receiving those services on July 3, 2007. See id. Inasmuch as Winston-Salem City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Winston-Salem City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Winston-Salem City's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Winston-Salem City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Winston-Salem City, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Winston-Salem City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Winston-Salem City filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Winston-Salem v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45658-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Winston-Salem City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Winston-Salem City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Winston-Salem City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Winston-Salem City, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

579. Craven County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45660-DAP: Plaintiff Craven County, North Carolina

Craven County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Craven County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Craven County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Craven County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Craven County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Craven County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Craven County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 5, 2018. See Craven County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45660-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Craven County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Craven County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Craven County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Craven County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Craven County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Craven County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Craven County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Craven County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Craven County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Craven County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Craven County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

580. Knox County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45665-DAP: Plaintiff Knox County, Ohio

Knox County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Knox County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Knox County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Knox County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Knox County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Knox County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Knox County amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 6, 2018. See Knox County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45665-DAP, ECF No. 25. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Knox County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Knox County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Knox County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Knox County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Knox County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Knox County, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Knox County is a plaintiff in Ohio. Knox County's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Knox County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Knox County filed its original complaint on May 11, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Knox County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45665-DAP, ECF No. 1. Knox County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Knox County, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

581. Dallas County, Alabama v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45667-DAP: Plaintiff Dallas County, Alabama

Dallas County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dallas County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dallas County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dallas County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Dallas County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dallas County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Dallas County amended its complaint on March 9, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 6, 2018. See Dallas County, Alabama v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45667-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Dallas County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Dallas County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Dallas County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Dallas County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Dallas County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Dallas County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Dallas County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

units shipped to Dallas County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.24% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Dallas County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Dallas County filed its original complaint on May 14, 2018. See Dallas County, Alabama v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45667-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Dallas County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Dallas County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Dallas County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Dallas County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Dallas County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Dallas County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Dallas County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Dallas County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Dallas County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Dallas County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Dallas County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Dallas County’s potential claims against them. Dallas County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Dallas County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Dallas County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Dallas County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Dallas County filed its original complaint on May 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Dallas County, Alabama v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45667-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Dallas County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Dallas County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Dallas County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Dallas County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Dallas County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 14, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Dallas County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Dallas County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

582. Shelby County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45668-DAP: Plaintiff Shelby County, Ohio

Shelby County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Shelby County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Shelby County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Shelby County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Shelby County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Shelby County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Shelby County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 6, 2018. *See Shelby County Board of County Commissioners v. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Shelby County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Shelby County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Shelby County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Shelby County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Shelby County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. (0.05% market share for Shelby County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Shelby County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.17% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Shelby County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Shelby County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Shelby County filed its original complaint on May 11, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Shelby County Board of County Commissioners v. of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Shelby County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Shelby County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Shelby County, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

583. County of Osceola v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45669-DAP: Plaintiff Osceola County, Florida

Osceola County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Osceola County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Osceola County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Osceola County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Osceola County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Osceola County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Osceola County amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 6, 2018. See County of Osceola v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45669-DAP, ECF

No. 37. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Osceola County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Osceola County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Osceola County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Osceola County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Osceola County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Osceola County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Osceola County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Decl. (0.14% market share for Osceola County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Osceola County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Osceola County filed its original complaint on November 20, 2017, but waited until February 22, 2018 to implement a litigation hold. See County of Osceola v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45669-DAP, ECF No. 2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: February 22, 2018). Osceola County's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Osceola County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Osceola County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Filed a Separate PBM Case. Osceola County previously filed an opioid case outside the MDL against the PBMs on March 17, 2023. See Palm Beach County et al. v. Mylan Pharms., Inc. et al., Case No. 9:23-cv-80431 (S.D. Fla.), ECF No. 1. Osceola County also voluntarily dismissed its claims against the PBMs in that case. Id., ECF Nos. 199, 200, 202, 203. By suing the PBMs outside the MDL in 2023, Osceola County shows that it possessed facts to assert claims against the PBMs before it moved to amend in the MDL, precluding a showing of good cause here. See Profitt, 2024 WL 3622448, at *4 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff previously possessed documents showing underlying factual basis for proposed claim).

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Osceola County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Osceola County filed its amended complaint on March 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Osceola v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45669-DAP, ECF No. 37. It is therefore indisputable that Osceola County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Osceola County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Osceola County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Osceola County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Osceola County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—nearly seven years after filing its original complaint on November 20, 2017—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Osceola County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

584. Wilkinson County Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45671-DAP: Plaintiff Wilkinson County, Georgia

Wilkinson County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wilkinson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wilkinson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wilkinson County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wilkinson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wilkinson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wilkinson County amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 7, 2018. See Wilkinson County Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45671-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wilkinson County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Wilkinson County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Wilkinson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wilkinson County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Wilkinson County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Wilkinson County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Wilkinson County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Wilkinson County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Wilkinson County filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018, but waited until April 15, 2022 to implement a litigation hold—nearly four years later. See Wilkinson County Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45671-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: April 15, 2022). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Wilkinson County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wilkinson County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wilkinson County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wilkinson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL

6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wilkinson County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wilkinson County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Wilkinson County's request for leave to amend to add a

RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wilkinson County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

585. Monroe County Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45672-DAP: Plaintiff Monroe County, Georgia

Monroe County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Monroe County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Monroe County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Monroe County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Monroe County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Monroe County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Monroe County filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018, but waited until March 19, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—ten months later. See Monroe County Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45672-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: March 19, 2019). Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Monroe County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

586. Town of Watertown v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45674-DAP: Plaintiff Watertown Town City, Massachusetts

Watertown Town City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Watertown Town City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Watertown Town City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Watertown Town City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Watertown Town City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Watertown Town City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Watertown Town City amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 7, 2018. See Town of Watertown v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45674-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Watertown Town City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Watertown Town City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Watertown Town City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Watertown Town City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Watertown Town City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Watertown Town City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Watertown Town City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Watertown Town City’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Watertown Town City cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Watertown Town City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.18% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Watertown Town City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Watertown Town City filed its original complaint on May 14, 2018. See Town of Watertown v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45674-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Watertown Town City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Watertown Town City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Watertown Town City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Watertown Town City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Watertown Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Watertown Town City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Watertown Town City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Watertown Town City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Watertown Town City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 14, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Watertown Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

587. Town of Plymouth v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45675-DAP: Plaintiff Plymouth Town, Massachusetts

Plymouth Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Plymouth Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Plymouth Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Plymouth Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Plymouth Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Plymouth Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Plymouth Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 7, 2018. See Town of Plymouth v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45675-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Plymouth Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Plymouth Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Plymouth Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Plymouth Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Plymouth Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Plymouth Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Plymouth Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Plymouth Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.001% market share for Plymouth Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Plymouth Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Decl., Exhibit C (0.18% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Plymouth Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Plymouth Town filed its original complaint on May 14, 2018. See Town of Plymouth v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45675-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Plymouth Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Plymouth Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Plymouth Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Plymouth Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Plymouth Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Plymouth Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Plymouth Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Plymouth Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Plymouth Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Plymouth Town's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute.

ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Plymouth Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Plymouth Town’s potential claims against them. Plymouth Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Plymouth Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Plymouth Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Plymouth Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Plymouth Town filed its original complaint on May 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Plymouth v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45675-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Plymouth Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Plymouth Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Plymouth Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Plymouth Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Plymouth Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 14, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Plymouth Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

588. Town of Acushnet, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45676-DAP: Plaintiff Acushnet Town, Massachusetts

Acushnet Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Acushnet Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Acushnet Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Acushnet Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Acushnet Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Acushnet Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Acushnet Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 7, 2018. See Town of Acushnet, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45676-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Acushnet Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Acushnet Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Acushnet Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Acushnet Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Acushnet Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Acushnet Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Acushnet Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.01% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Acushnet Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Acushnet Town filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018. See Town of Acushnet, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45676-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Acushnet Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Acushnet Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Acushnet Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Acushnet Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Acushnet Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Acushnet Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Acushnet Town’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Acushnet Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Acushnet Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Acushnet Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Acushnet Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Acushnet Town’s potential claims against them. Acushnet Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Acushnet Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Acushnet Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Acushnet Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Acushnet Town filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Acushnet, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45676-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Acushnet Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Acushnet Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Acushnet Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Acushnet Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Acushnet Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 16, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Acushnet Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

589. City of Amesbury v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45678-DAP: Plaintiff Amesbury Town City, Massachusetts

Amesbury Town City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Amesbury Town City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Amesbury Town City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Amesbury Town City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Amesbury Town City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Amesbury Town City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Amesbury Town City amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 7, 2018. See City of Amesbury v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45678-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Amesbury Town City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Amesbury Town City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Amesbury Town City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Amesbury Town City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Amesbury Town City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Amesbury Town City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Amesbury Town City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Amesbury Town City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Amesbury Town City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Amesbury Town City filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018. See City of Amesbury v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45678-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Amesbury Town City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Amesbury Town City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Amesbury Town City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Amesbury Town City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Amesbury Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Amesbury Town City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Amesbury Town City filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Amesbury v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45678-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Amesbury Town City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Amesbury Town City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Amesbury Town City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Amesbury Town City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Amesbury Town City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 16, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Amesbury Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

590. County of Tehama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45680-DAP: Plaintiff Tehama County, California

Tehama County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Tehama County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Tehama County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Tehama County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Tehama County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Tehama County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Tehama County filed its original complaint on May 14, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on June 7, 2018. See County of Tehama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45680-DAP, ECF No. 9. Tehama County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Tehama County elected not to do so. Instead, Tehama County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Tehama County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Tehama County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Tehama County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Tehama County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006

(affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Failure to State a Claim. Tehama County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Tehama County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Tehama County filed its original complaint on May 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Tehama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45680-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Tehama County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Tehama County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Tehama County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Tehama County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

591. Dare County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45683-DAP: Plaintiff Dare County, North Carolina

Dare County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dare County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dare County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dare County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Dare County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dare County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Dare County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 11, 2018. See Dare County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45683-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Dare County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Dare County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Dare County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Dare County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Dare County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.06% market share for Dare County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Dare County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Dare County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.35% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Dare County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Dare County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Dare County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Dare County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Dare County filed its original complaint on May 11, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Dare County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45683-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Dare County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Dare County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No.

2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Dare County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Dare County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

592. City of Wilmington v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45684-DAP: Plaintiff Wilmington City, North Carolina

Wilmington City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wilmington City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wilmington City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wilmington City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wilmington City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wilmington City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wilmington City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 11, 2018. See City of Wilmington v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45684-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wilmington City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Wilmington City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Wilmington City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wilmington City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Wilmington City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Wilmington City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Wilmington City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Wilmington City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson

Decl. (0.06% market share for Wilmington City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Wilmington City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Wilmington City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.30% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Wilmington City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wilmington City filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018. See City of Wilmington v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45684-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wilmington City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Wilmington City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wilmington City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wilmington City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wilmington City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wilmington City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wilmington City, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Wilmington City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Wilmington City filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Wilmington v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45684-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Wilmington City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Wilmington City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Wilmington City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wilmington City, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

593. Alachua County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45685-DAP: Plaintiff Alachua County, Florida

Alachua County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Alachua County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Alachua County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Alachua County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Alachua County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Alachua County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Alachua County amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 11, 2018. See Alachua County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45685-DAP, ECF No. 15. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Alachua County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Alachua County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Alachua County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Alachua County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Alachua County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Alachua County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Alachua County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Alachua County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Alachua County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Alachua County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Alachua County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Alachua County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Alachua County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Alachua County's potential claims against them. Alachua County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Alachua County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Alachua County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Filed a Separate PBM Case. Alachua County previously filed an opioid case outside the MDL against the PBMs on March 17, 2023. See Palm Beach County et al. v. Mylan Pharms., Inc. et al., Case No. 9:23-cv-80431 (S.D. Fla.), ECF No. 1. Alachua County also voluntarily dismissed its claims against the PBMs in that case. Id., ECF Nos. 199, 200, 202, 203. By suing the PBMs outside the MDL in 2023, Alachua County shows that it possessed facts to assert claims against the PBMs before it moved to amend in the MDL, precluding a showing of good cause here. See Profitt, 2024 WL 3622448, at *4 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff previously possessed documents showing underlying factual basis for proposed claim).

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Alachua County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Alachua County filed its amended complaint on May 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Alachua County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45685-DAP, ECF No. 15. It is therefore indisputable that Alachua County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Alachua County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Alachua County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Alachua County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Alachua County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on January 30, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Alachua County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

594. Town of Southbridge v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45686-DAP: Plaintiff Southbridge Town City, Massachusetts

Southbridge Town City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Southbridge Town City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Southbridge Town City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Southbridge Town City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Southbridge Town City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Southbridge Town City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Southbridge Town City amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 11, 2018. See Town of Southbridge v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45686-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Southbridge Town City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Southbridge Town City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Southbridge Town City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Southbridge Town City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Southbridge Town City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Southbridge Town City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Southbridge Town City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Southbridge Town City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Southbridge Town City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Southbridge Town City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Southbridge Town City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.07% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Southbridge Town City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Southbridge Town City filed its original complaint on May 14, 2018. See Town of Southbridge v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45686-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Southbridge Town City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Southbridge Town City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Southbridge Town City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Southbridge Town City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Southbridge Town City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Southbridge Town City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Southbridge Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Southbridge Town City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Southbridge Town City filed its original complaint on May 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Southbridge v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45686-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Southbridge Town City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Southbridge Town City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Southbridge Town City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Southbridge Town City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Southbridge Town City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 14, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Southbridge Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

595. Town of Winchendon Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45687-DAP: Plaintiff Winchendon Town, Massachusetts

Winchendon Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Winchendon Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Winchendon Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Winchendon Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Winchendon Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Winchendon Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Winchendon Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 11, 2018. See Town of Winchendon Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45687-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Winchendon Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Winchendon Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Winchendon Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Winchendon Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Winchendon Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Winchendon Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Winchendon Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Winchendon Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Winchendon Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

units shipped to Winchendon Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.26% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Winchendon Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Winchendon Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Winchendon Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Winchendon Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Winchendon Town filed its original complaint on May 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Town of Winchendon Massachusetts v. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Winchendon Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Winchendon Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Winchendon Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 14, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Winchendon Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

596. Town of Auburn v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45688-DAP: Plaintiff Auburn Town, Massachusetts

Auburn Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Auburn Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Auburn Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Auburn Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Auburn Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Auburn Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Auburn Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.06% market share for Auburn Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Auburn Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Auburn Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.14% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Auburn Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. 597. Town of Charlton v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45689-DAP: Plaintiff Charlton Town, Massachusetts

Charlton Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Charlton Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Charlton Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Charlton Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Charlton Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

It is therefore indisputable that Charlton Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Charlton Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

598. City of Prichard, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45690-DAP: Plaintiff Prichard City, Alabama

Prichard City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Prichard City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Prichard City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Prichard City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Prichard City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Prichard City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Prichard City amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 11, 2018. See City of Prichard, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45690-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Prichard City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Prichard City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Prichard City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Prichard City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Prichard City filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018. See City of Prichard, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45690-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Prichard City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Prichard City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Prichard City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Prichard City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Prichard City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Prichard City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Prichard City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Prichard City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Prichard City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Prichard City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Prichard City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Prichard City's potential claims against them. Prichard City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Prichard City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Prichard City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Prichard City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Prichard City filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Prichard, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45690-DAP, ECF No.

1. It is therefore indisputable that Prichard City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Prichard City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Prichard City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Prichard City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Prichard City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 16, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Prichard City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

599. Town of Carver v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45691-DAP: Plaintiff Carver Town, Massachusetts

Carver Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Carver Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Carver Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Carver Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Carver Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Carver Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Carver Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 11, 2018. See Town of Carver v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45691-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Carver Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Carver Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Carver Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Carver Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Carver Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Carver Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Carver Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Carver Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Carver Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Carver Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Carver Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Carver Town’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Carver Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Carver Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Carver Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Carver Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Carver Town’s potential claims against them. Carver Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Carver Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Carver Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Carver Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Carver Town filed its original complaint on May 17, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Carver v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45691-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Carver Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Carver Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Carver Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Carver Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Carver Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 17, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Carver Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

600. City of Chelsea v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45693-DAP: Plaintiff Chelsea City, Massachusetts

Chelsea City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chelsea City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chelsea City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chelsea City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Chelsea City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chelsea City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Chelsea City amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 11, 2018. See City of Chelsea v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45693-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Chelsea City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Chelsea City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Chelsea City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Chelsea City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Chelsea City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey &

Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Chelsea City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Chelsea City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chelsea City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

a finding of good cause for Chelsea City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Chelsea City filed its original complaint on May 17, 2018. See City of Chelsea v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45693-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Chelsea City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Chelsea City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Chelsea City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Chelsea City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Chelsea City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Chelsea City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chelsea City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

601. City of Holyoke v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45694-DAP: Plaintiff Holyoke City, Massachusetts

Holyoke City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Holyoke City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Holyoke City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Holyoke City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Holyoke City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Holyoke City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Holyoke City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Holyoke City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Holyoke City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

The PBMs notified Holyoke City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Holyoke City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Holyoke City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Holyoke City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Holyoke City's potential claims against them. Holyoke City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Holyoke City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Holyoke City filed its original complaint on May 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Holyoke v. Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Holyoke City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Holyoke City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 14, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

602. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45696-DAP: Plaintiff Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation, Nevada

Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation amended its complaint on August 12, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See

Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45696-DAP, ECF No. 28. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation filed its original complaint on June 8, 2018. See Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45696-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Pyramid

Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Nevada law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Nevada law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation, a native tribe in Nevada, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation filed its original complaint on June 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45696-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of the Pyramid Lake Reservation, a native tribe in Nevada, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

603. Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45697-DAP: Plaintiff Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony, Nevada

Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony's motion should be denied due to futility, as Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony amended its complaint on August 12, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45697-DAP, ECF No. 28. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony's deadline to amend was in 2019. Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.47% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony filed its original complaint on June 8, 2018. *See Paiute-Shoshone Tribe of the Fallon Reservation and Colony v. 604. Walker River Paiute Tribe of The Walker River Reservation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45698-DAP: Plaintiff Walker River Paiute Tribe of The Walker River Reservation, Nevada

Walker River Paiute Tribe of The Walker River Reservation's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al.*, Case No. 1:18-op-45700-DAP: Plaintiff United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust, Tennessee

United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust's motion should be denied due to futility, as United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 8, 2018. See United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45700-DAP, ECF No. 1. United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust elected not to do so. United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW

Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust filed its original complaint on June 8, 2018. See United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45700-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Tennessee law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Tennessee law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust, a third party payor in Tennessee, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust filed its original complaint on June 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45700-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on June 8, 2022. United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. United Food and Commercial Workers Union UFCW Local 1529 and Employers Health and Welfare Plan and Trust, a third party payor in Tennessee, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

607. City of North Adams v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45702-DAP: Plaintiff North Adams City, Massachusetts

North Adams City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. North Adams City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. North Adams City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, North Adams City's motion should be denied due to futility, as North Adams City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. North Adams City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, North Adams City amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 12, 2018. See City of North Adams v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45702-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, North Adams City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. North Adams City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. North Adams City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. North Adams City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. North Adams City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. North Adams City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. North Adams City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to North Adams City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for North Adams City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for North Adams City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to North Adams City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.11% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for North Adams City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But North Adams City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. North Adams City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for North Adams City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. North Adams City filed its original complaint on May 18, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of North Adams v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45702-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that North Adams City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. North Adams City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. North Adams City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. North Adams City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because North Adams City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 18, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. North Adams City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

608. Town of Nantucket v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45703-DAP: Plaintiff Nantucket Town, Massachusetts

Nantucket Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Nantucket Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Nantucket Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Nantucket Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Nantucket Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Nantucket Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Nantucket Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Nantucket Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Nantucket Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

(0.002% market share for Nantucket Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Nantucket Town to add dispensing claims against

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Nantucket Town filed its original complaint on May 18, 2018. See Town of Nantucket v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45703-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Nantucket Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Nantucket Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Nantucket Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Nantucket Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Nantucket Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Nantucket Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. 609. Town of Hanson v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45704-DAP: Plaintiff Hanson Town, Massachusetts

Hanson Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hanson Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hanson Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hanson Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Hanson Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Hanson Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Hanson Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

610. Town of Freetown v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45705-DAP: Plaintiff Freetown Town, Massachusetts

Freetown Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Freetown Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Freetown Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Freetown Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Freetown Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

It is therefore indisputable that Freetown Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Freetown Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Freetown Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Freetown Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Freetown Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 17, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Freetown Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

611. Town of Douglas v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45706-DAP: Plaintiff Douglas Town, Massachusetts

Douglas Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Douglas Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Douglas Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Douglas Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Douglas Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Douglas Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Douglas Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 12, 2018. See Town of Douglas v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45706-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Douglas Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Douglas Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Douglas Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Douglas Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Douglas Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Douglas Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Douglas Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts' PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts' PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Douglas Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts' PBM "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Douglas Town filed its original complaint on May 17, 2018. See Town of Douglas v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45706-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Douglas Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Douglas Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Douglas Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Douglas Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Douglas Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Douglas Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Douglas Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Douglas Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Douglas Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Douglas Town's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Douglas Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Douglas Town’s potential claims against them. Douglas Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Douglas Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Douglas Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Douglas Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Douglas Town filed its original complaint on May 17, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Douglas v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45706-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Douglas Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Douglas Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Douglas Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Douglas Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Douglas Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 17, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Douglas Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

612. Town of Dudley v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45707-DAP: Plaintiff Dudley Town, Massachusetts

Dudley Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dudley Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dudley Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dudley Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Dudley Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dudley Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Dudley Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Dudley Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Dudley Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

613. Town of Leicester v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45709-DAP: Plaintiff Leicester Town, Massachusetts

Leicester Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Leicester Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Leicester Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Leicester Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Leicester Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Leicester Town violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Leicester Town filed its original complaint on May 17, 2018, but waited until September 26, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—six years and four months later. *See Town of Leicester v. Litigating Leominster City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Leominster City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Leominster City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Leominster City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Leominster City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Leominster City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Leominster City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Leominster City filed its original complaint on May 17, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Leominster v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45710-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Leominster City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Leominster City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555));

see Section III.B.4, above. Leominster City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Leominster City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Leominster City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 17, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Leominster City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

615. Town of Northbridge v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45711-DAP: Plaintiff Northbridge Town, Massachusetts

Northbridge Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Northbridge Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Northbridge Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Northbridge Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Northbridge Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Northbridge Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Northbridge Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 13, 2018. See Town of Northbridge v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45711-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Northbridge Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Northbridge Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Northbridge Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Northbridge Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Northbridge Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Northbridge Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Northbridge Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Northbridge Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Northbridge Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Northbridge Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Northbridge Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Northbridge Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Northbridge Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Northbridge Town filed its original complaint on May 18, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Town of Northbridge v. Northbridge Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Northbridge Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

616. Lincoln County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45719-DAP: Plaintiff Lincoln County, North Carolina

Lincoln County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lincoln County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lincoln County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lincoln County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lincoln County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lincoln County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lincoln County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lincoln County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lincoln County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lincoln County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Lincoln County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Lincoln County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lincoln County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Lincoln County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.29% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lincoln County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lincoln County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lincoln County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

617. Town of East Bridgewater v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45721-DAP: Plaintiff East Bridgewater Town, Massachusetts

East Bridgewater Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. East Bridgewater Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. East Bridgewater Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, East Bridgewater Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as East Bridgewater Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Unlike many other plaintiffs, East Bridgewater Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. East Bridgewater Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. East Bridgewater Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. East Bridgewater Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

618. Lincoln County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45722-DAP1: Plaintiff Lincoln County, Mississippi

Lincoln County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lincoln County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lincoln County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

619. Prentiss County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45723-DAP: Plaintiff Prentiss County, Mississippi

Prentiss County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Prentiss County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Prentiss County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Prentiss County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Prentiss County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Prentiss County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Prentiss County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 14, 2018. See Prentiss County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45723-DAP, ECF No. 23. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Prentiss County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Prentiss County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Prentiss County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Prentiss County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Prentiss County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Prentiss County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Prentiss County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

units shipped to Prentiss County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.06% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Prentiss County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Prentiss County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Prentiss County, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Prentiss County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Prentiss County filed its amended complaint on March 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Prentiss County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45723-DAP, ECF No. 23. It is therefore indisputable that Prentiss County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Prentiss County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Prentiss County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Prentiss County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

620. Tyrrell County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45725-DAP: Plaintiff Tyrrell County, North Carolina

Tyrrell County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Tyrrell County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Tyrrell County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Tyrrell County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Tyrrell County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Tyrrell County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Tyrrell County amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 14, 2018. See Tyrrell County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45725-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Tyrrell County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Tyrrell County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Tyrrell County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Tyrrell County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Tyrrell County’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Tyrrell County cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Tyrrell County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.14% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Tyrrell County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Tyrrell County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Tyrrell County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Tyrrell County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Tyrrell County filed its original complaint on May 23, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Tyrrell County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45725-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Tyrrell County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Tyrrell County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Tyrrell County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Tyrrell County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

621. City of Fayetteville v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45726-DAP: Plaintiff Fayetteville City, North Carolina

Fayetteville City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fayetteville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fayetteville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fayetteville City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Fayetteville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fayetteville City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Fayetteville City amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 14, 2018. See City Of Fayetteville v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45726-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Fayetteville City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Fayetteville City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Fayetteville City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Fayetteville City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Fayetteville City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Fayetteville City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Fayetteville City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Fayetteville City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Fayetteville City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Fayetteville City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Fayetteville City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.14% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Fayetteville City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Fayetteville City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Fayetteville City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Fayetteville City began receiving those services on July 1, 2012. See id. Inasmuch as Fayetteville City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Fayetteville City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Fayetteville City’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Fayetteville City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Fayetteville City filed its original complaint on May 23, 2018, but waited until September 27, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than six years later. See City Of Fayetteville v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45726-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 27, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Fayetteville City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Fayetteville City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Fayetteville City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Fayetteville City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Fayetteville City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Fayetteville City, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Fayetteville City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Fayetteville City filed its original complaint on May 23, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City Of Fayetteville v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45726-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Fayetteville City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Fayetteville City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Fayetteville City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Fayetteville City, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

622. City of Franklin, NH v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45728-DAP: Plaintiff Franklin City, New Hampshire

Franklin City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Franklin City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Franklin City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Franklin City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Franklin City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Franklin City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Franklin City amended its complaint on March 9, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 14, 2018. See City of Franklin, NH v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45728-DAP, ECF No. 20. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Franklin City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Franklin City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Franklin City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Franklin City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Franklin City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Franklin City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Franklin City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Franklin City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.002% market share for Franklin City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Franklin City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

a finding of good cause for Franklin City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Hampshire law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Franklin City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Hampshire law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Franklin City, a municipality in New Hampshire, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Franklin City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Franklin City filed its original complaint on May 22, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Franklin, NH v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45728-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Franklin City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Franklin City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Franklin City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Franklin City, a municipality in New Hampshire, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

623. Escambia County, Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45729-DAP: Plaintiff Escambia County, Florida

Escambia County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Escambia County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Escambia County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Escambia County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Escambia County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Escambia County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Escambia County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 14, 2018. See Escambia County, Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45729-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Escambia County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Escambia County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Escambia County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Escambia County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Escambia County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A., and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Escambia County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Escambia County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Escambia County filed its original complaint on May 22, 2018. See Escambia County, Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45729-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Escambia County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Escambia County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Escambia County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Escambia County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Escambia County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Escambia County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Escambia County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Escambia County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Escambia County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Escambia County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Escambia County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Escambia County’s potential claims against them. Escambia County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Escambia County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Escambia County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Escambia County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Escambia County filed its original complaint on May 22, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Escambia County, Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45729-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Escambia County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Escambia County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Escambia County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Escambia County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Escambia County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 22, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Escambia County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

624. Nez Perce Tribe v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45730-DAP: Plaintiff Nez Perce Tribe, Idaho

Nez Perce Tribe’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Nez Perce Tribe failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Nez Perce Tribe also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Nez Perce Tribe’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Nez Perce Tribe does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Nez Perce Tribe was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Nez Perce Tribe amended its complaint on August 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 14, 2018, as well as on December 24, 2020. See Nez Perce Tribe v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45730-DAP, ECF Nos. 24, 28. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Nez Perce Tribe declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Nez Perce Tribe’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Nez Perce Tribe waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Nez Perce Tribe’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459

(affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Idaho law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Nez Perce Tribe’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Idaho law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Nez Perce Tribe, a native tribe in Idaho, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Nez Perce Tribe’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Nez Perce Tribe filed its original complaint on May 18, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Nez Perce Tribe v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45730-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Nez Perce Tribe knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Nez Perce Tribe's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Nez Perce Tribe's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Nez Perce Tribe, a native tribe in Idaho, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

625. United Food and Commercial Worker Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45733-DAP: Plaintiff United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund, Oklahoma

United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund's motion should be denied due to futility, as United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Oklahoma, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 15, 2018. See United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45733-DAP, ECF No. 1. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund elected not to do so. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Oklahoma law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Oklahoma law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund, a third party payor in Oklahoma, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund is a plaintiff in Oklahoma. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because Oklahoma's public nuisance law does not extend to "the manufacturing, marketing, and selling of prescription opioids." Hunter, 499 P.3d at 730; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund filed its original complaint on June 15, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45733-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on June 15, 2022. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare

Fund's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. United Food and Commercial Workers Local 1000 Oklahoma Health and Welfare Fund, a third party payor in Oklahoma, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

626. Chilton County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45735-DAP: Plaintiff Chilton County, Alabama

Chilton County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chilton County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chilton County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chilton County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Chilton County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chilton County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Chilton County amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 15, 2018. See Chilton County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45735-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Chilton County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Chilton County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Chilton County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Chilton County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Chilton County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Chilton County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Chilton County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the "plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint"); Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Decl. (0.04% market share for Chilton County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chilton County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Chilton County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.13% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chilton County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Chilton County filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018. See Chilton County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45735-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Chilton County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Chilton County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Chilton County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Chilton County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Chilton County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Chilton County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Chilton County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Chilton County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Chilton County filed its original complaint on June 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Chilton County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45735-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Chilton County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Chilton County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Chilton County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Chilton County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Chilton County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 1, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chilton County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chilton County, a municipality in Alabama, also lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

627. City of Hartselle, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45736-DAP: Plaintiff Hartselle City, Alabama

Hartselle City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hartselle City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hartselle City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hartselle City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Hartselle City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hartselle City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hartselle City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 15, 2018. See City of Hartselle, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45736-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hartselle City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Hartselle City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Hartselle City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hartselle City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Hartselle City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Hartselle City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Hartselle City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Hartselle City filed its original complaint on May 25, 2018. See City of Hartselle, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45736-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Hartselle City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Hartselle City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Hartselle City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Hartselle City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Hartselle City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hartselle City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Hartselle City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Hartselle City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Hartselle City filed its original complaint on May 25, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Hartselle, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45736-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Hartselle City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Hartselle City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Hartselle City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Hartselle City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Hartselle City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 25, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hartselle City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

628. City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP: Plaintiff Carbon Hill City, Alabama

Carbon Hill City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Carbon Hill City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Carbon Hill City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Carbon Hill City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Carbon Hill City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Carbon Hill City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Carbon Hill City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 15, 2018. See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Carbon Hill City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Carbon Hill City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Carbon Hill City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Carbon Hill City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Carbon Hill City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.06% market share for Carbon Hill City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Carbon Hill City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Carbon Hill City filed its original complaint on May 24, 2018. See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Carbon Hill City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Carbon Hill City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Carbon Hill City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Carbon Hill City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Carbon Hill City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Carbon Hill City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Carbon Hill City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Carbon Hill City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Carbon Hill City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Carbon Hill City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Carbon Hill City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Carbon Hill City's potential claims against them. Carbon Hill City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Carbon Hill City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Carbon Hill City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Carbon Hill City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Carbon Hill City filed its original complaint on May 24, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Carbon Hill City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Carbon Hill City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Carbon Hill City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Carbon Hill City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Carbon Hill City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 24, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Carbon Hill City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

629. City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP: Plaintiff Cordova City, Alabama

Cordova City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cordova City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cordova City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cordova City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Cordova City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

(0.01% market share for Cordova City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cordova City to add dispensing claims against

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Cordova City filed its original complaint on May 24, 2018. *See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. 630. City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP: Plaintiff Nauvoo Town, Alabama

Nauvoo Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Nauvoo Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Nauvoo Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Nauvoo Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Nauvoo Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Nauvoo Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Nauvoo Town filed its original complaint on May 24, 2018. *See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. 631. City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP: Plaintiff Oakman Town, Alabama

Oakman Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Oakman Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Oakman Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Oakman Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Oakman Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Oakman Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Oakman Town amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 15, 2018. See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Oakman Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Oakman Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Oakman Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Oakman Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Oakman Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Oakman Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Oakman Town filed its original complaint on May 24, 2018. See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP, ECF No. 1. amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

But Oakman Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Oakman Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Oakman Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Oakman Town filed its original complaint on May 24, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Oakman Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Oakman Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Oakman Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Oakman Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Oakman Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 24, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Oakman Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

632. City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP: Plaintiff Parrish Town, Alabama

Parrish Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Parrish Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Parrish Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Parrish Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Parrish Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Parrish Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Parrish Town amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 15, 2018. See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Parrish Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Parrish Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Parrish Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Parrish Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Parrish Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Parrish Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Parrish Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

a finding of good cause for Parrish Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Parrish Town filed its original complaint on May 24, 2018. See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Parrish Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Parrish Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Parrish Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Parrish Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Parrish Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Parrish Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Parrish Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Parrish Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Parrish Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Parrish Town's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Parrish Town's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Parrish

Town's potential claims against them. Parrish Town's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Parrish Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Parrish Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Parrish Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Parrish Town filed its original complaint on May 24, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Parrish Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Parrish Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Parrish Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Parrish Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Parrish Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 24, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Parrish Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

633. City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP: Plaintiff Sipsey Town, Alabama

Sipsey Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sipsey Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sipsey Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sipsey Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sipsey Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sipsey Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sipsey Town amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 15, 2018 See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sipsey Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sipsey Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Sipsey Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sipsey Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Sipsey Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Sipsey Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Sipsey Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sipsey Town filed its original complaint on May 24, 2018. See City of Nauvoo, Alabama, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45737-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sipsey Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sipsey Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sipsey Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sipsey Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sipsey Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sipsey Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sipsey Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sipsey Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sipsey Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sipsey Town's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sipsey Town's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sipsey Town's potential claims against them. Sipsey Town's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sipsey Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sipsey Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sipsey Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

634. City of Winfield, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45738-DAP: Plaintiff Winfield City, Alabama

Winfield City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Winfield City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Winfield City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Winfield City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Winfield City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Winfield City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Winfield City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Winfield City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Winfield City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

units shipped to Winfield City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.07% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Winfield City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Winfield City filed its original complaint on May 28, 2018. See City of Winfield, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45738-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Winfield City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Under this Court’s orders, Winfield City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1

(emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Winfield City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Winfield City’s potential claims against them. Winfield City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

It is therefore indisputable that Winfield City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Winfield City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Winfield City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Winfield City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Winfield City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 28, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Winfield City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

635. Town of Double Springs, AL v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45739-DAP: Plaintiff Double Springs Town, Alabama

Double Springs Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Double Springs Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Double Springs Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Double Springs Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Double Springs Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Double Springs Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Double Springs Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 15, 2018. See Town of Double Springs, AL v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45739-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Double Springs Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Double Springs Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Double Springs Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Double Springs Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Double Springs Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Double Springs Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Double Springs Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Double Springs Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Double Springs Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Double Springs Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Double Springs Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.20% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Double Springs Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Double Springs Town filed its original complaint on May 25, 2018. See Town of Double Springs, AL v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45739-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Double Springs Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Double Springs Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Double Springs Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Double Springs Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Double Springs Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Double Springs Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Double Springs Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Double Springs Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Double Springs Town filed its original complaint on May 25, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Double Springs, AL v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45739-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Double Springs Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Double Springs Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Double Springs Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Double Springs Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Double Springs Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 25, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Double Springs Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

636. Conejos County et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45740-DAP: Plaintiff Alamosa City, Colorado

Alamosa City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Alamosa City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Alamosa City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Alamosa City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Alamosa City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Alamosa City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Alamosa City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 18, 2018. See Conejos County et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45740-DAP, ECF No. 13. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Alamosa City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Alamosa City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Alamosa City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Alamosa City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Alamosa City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.11% market share for Alamosa City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Alamosa City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

637. Conejos County et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45740-DAP: Plaintiff Alamosa County, Colorado

638. Conejos County et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45740-DAP: Plaintiff Conejos County, Colorado

Conejos County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Conejos County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Conejos County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Conejos County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Conejos County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Conejos County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Conejos County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Conejos County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Conejos County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Conejos County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Conejos County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Conejos County’s potential claims against them. Conejos County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Conejos County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. 639. Conejos County et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45740-DAP: Plaintiff Las Animas County, Colorado

Las Animas County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Las Animas County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Las Animas County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Las Animas County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Las Animas County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Las Animas County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. (0.05% market share for Las Animas County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Las Animas County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Las Animas County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.40% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Las Animas County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Las Animas County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Las Animas County, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Las Animas County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Las Animas County filed its amended complaint on May 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Conejos County et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45740-DAP, ECF No. 13. It is therefore indisputable that Las Animas County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Las Animas County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Las Animas County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Las Animas County, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

640. Conejos County et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45740-DAP: Plaintiff Otero County, Colorado

Otero County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Otero County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Otero County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Otero County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Otero County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Otero County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Otero County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 18, 2018. See Conejos County et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45740-DAP, ECF No. 13. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Otero County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Otero County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Otero County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Otero County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Otero County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.17% market share for Otero County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Otero County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

a finding of good cause for Otero County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Otero County filed its original complaint on May 29, 2018. See Conejos County et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45740-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Otero County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Otero County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Otero County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Otero County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Otero County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Otero County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Otero County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Otero County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Otero County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Otero County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Otero County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Otero County's potential claims against them. Otero County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Otero County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Otero County, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Otero County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Otero County filed its amended complaint on May 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Conejos County et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45740-DAP, ECF No. 13. It is therefore indisputable that Otero County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Otero County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of

[the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Otero County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Otero County, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

641. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45741-DAP: Plaintiff Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund, New Jersey

Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 18, 2018, as well as on February 27, 2023. See Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45741-DAP, ECF Nos. 9, 16. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Eastern Atlantic States

Carpenters Health Fund declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund began receiving those services on October 18, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund filed its original complaint on April 9, 2018, but waited until September 17, 2018 to implement a litigation hold. See Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45741-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 17, 2018). Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Jersey law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Jersey law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund, a third party payor in New Jersey, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund filed its first amended complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45741-DAP, ECF No. 9. It is therefore indisputable that Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Eastern Atlantic States Carpenters Health Fund, a third party payor in New Jersey, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

642. Pinellas County, Florida v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45742-DAP: Plaintiff Pinellas County, Florida

Pinellas County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pinellas County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pinellas County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pinellas County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Pinellas County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pinellas County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pinellas County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 18, 2018. See Pinellas County, Florida v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45742-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pinellas County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Pinellas County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Pinellas County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pinellas County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Pinellas County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A., and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Pinellas County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Pinellas County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006

(affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Pinellas County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Pinellas County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Pinellas County began receiving those services on January 1, 2012. See id. Inasmuch as Pinellas County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Pinellas County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Pinellas County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pinellas County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pinellas County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Pinellas County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Pinellas County filed its original complaint on May 18, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Pinellas County, Florida v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45742-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Pinellas County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Pinellas County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Pinellas County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Pinellas County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Pinellas County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 18, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pinellas County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

643. Town of Lakeville v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45743-DAP: Plaintiff Lakeville Town, Massachusetts

Lakeville Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lakeville Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lakeville Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lakeville Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lakeville Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lakeville Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lakeville Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 18, 2018. See Town of Lakeville v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45743-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lakeville Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lakeville Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lakeville Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lakeville Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Lakeville Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Lakeville Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Lakeville Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

too low to support a finding of good cause for Lakeville Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lakeville Town filed its original complaint on May 17, 2018. See Town of Lakeville v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45743-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lakeville Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lakeville Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lakeville Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lakeville Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lakeville Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lakeville Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lakeville Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lakeville Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lakeville Town filed its original complaint on May 17, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Lakeville v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45743-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lakeville Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Lakeville Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lakeville Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Lakeville Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Lakeville Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 17, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lakeville Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

644. Town of North Attleborough v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45744-DAP: Plaintiff North Attleborough Town, Massachusetts

North Attleborough Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. North Attleborough Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. North Attleborough Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, North Attleborough Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as North Attleborough Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. North Attleborough Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above.

Moreover, North Attleborough Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 18, 2018. See Town of North Attleborough v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45744-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, North Attleborough Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. North Attleborough Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. North Attleborough Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. North Attleborough Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. North Attleborough Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. North Attleborough Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. North Attleborough Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to North Attleborough Town's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for North Attleborough Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for North Attleborough Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to North Attleborough Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.17% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for North Attleborough Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. North Attleborough Town filed its original complaint on May 18, 2018. See Town of North Attleborough v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45744-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, North Attleborough Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating North Attleborough Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of North Attleborough Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by North Attleborough Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and North Attleborough Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, North Attleborough Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to North Attleborough Town’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified North Attleborough Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but North Attleborough Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, North Attleborough Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. North Attleborough Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against North Attleborough Town’s potential claims against them. North Attleborough Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But North Attleborough Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. North Attleborough Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for North Attleborough Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. North Attleborough Town filed its original complaint on May 18, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of North Attleborough v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45744-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that North Attleborough Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. North Attleborough Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. North Attleborough Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. North Attleborough Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because North Attleborough Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 18, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. North Attleborough Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

645. Seneca Nation of Indians v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45746-DAP: Plaintiff Seneca Nation of Indians, New York

Seneca Nation of Indians’ untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Seneca Nation of Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Seneca Nation of Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Seneca Nation of Indians’ motion should be denied due to futility, as Seneca Nation of Indians does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45746-DAP, ECF Nos. 7, 25. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Seneca Nation of Indians declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Seneca Nation of Indians’ deadline to amend was in 2019. Seneca Nation of Indians waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Seneca Nation of Indians’ lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Seneca Nation of Indians, a native tribe in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Seneca Nation of Indians' request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

646. Cabarrus County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45747-DAP: Plaintiff Cabarrus County, North Carolina

Cabarrus County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cabarrus County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cabarrus County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cabarrus County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Cabarrus County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cabarrus County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. 647. Blackfeet Tribe of The Blackfeet Indian Reservation v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45749-DAP: Plaintiff Blackfeet Tribe of The Blackfeet Indian Reservation, Montana

Blackfeet Tribe of The Blackfeet Indian Reservation’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Blackfeet Tribe of The Blackfeet Indian Reservation failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Blackfeet Tribe of The Blackfeet Indian Reservation also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Blackfeet Tribe of The Blackfeet Indian Reservation’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Blackfeet Tribe of The Blackfeet Indian Reservation does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Reservation's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Blackfeet Tribe of The Blackfeet Indian Reservation's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Blackfeet Tribe of The Blackfeet Indian Reservation, a native tribe in Montana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

648. Town of Marshfield, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45752-DAP: Plaintiff Marshfield Town, Massachusetts

Marshfield Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Marshfield Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Marshfield Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Marshfield Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Marshfield Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Marshfield Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Marshfield Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 27, 2018. See Town of Marshfield, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45752-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Marshfield Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Marshfield Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Marshfield Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Marshfield Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Marshfield Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Marshfield Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Marshfield Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Marshfield Town's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.06% market share for Marshfield Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Marshfield Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Marshfield Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.20% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Marshfield Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Marshfield Town filed its original complaint on June 5, 2018. See Town of Marshfield, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45752-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Marshfield Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Marshfield Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Marshfield Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Marshfield Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Marshfield Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See

Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Marshfield Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Marshfield Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Marshfield Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Marshfield Town filed its original complaint on June 5, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Marshfield, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45752-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Marshfield Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Marshfield Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Marshfield Town’s request for leave to amend to add a

RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Marshfield Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Marshfield Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 5, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Marshfield Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

649. Town of Bridgewater, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45754-DAP: Plaintiff Bridgewater Town, Massachusetts

Bridgewater Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bridgewater Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bridgewater Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bridgewater Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Bridgewater Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

651. Vance County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45759-DAP: Plaintiff Vance County, North Carolina

Vance County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Vance County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Vance County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Vance County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Vance County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

It is therefore indisputable that Vance County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Vance County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Vance County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Vance County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

652. Town of Danvers, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45760-DAP: Plaintiff Danvers Town, Massachusetts

Danvers Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Danvers Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Danvers Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Danvers Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Danvers Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Danvers Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Danvers Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 28, 2018. See Town of Danvers, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45760-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Danvers Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Danvers Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Danvers Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Danvers Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Danvers Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Danvers Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Danvers Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Danvers Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Danvers Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Danvers Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.11% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Danvers Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Danvers Town filed its original complaint on June 5, 2018. See Town of Danvers, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45760-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Danvers Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Danvers Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Danvers Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Danvers Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Danvers Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Danvers Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Danvers Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Danvers Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Danvers Town filed its original complaint on June 5, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Danvers, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45760-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Danvers Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Danvers Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Danvers Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Danvers Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Danvers Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 5, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Danvers Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

653. City of Newark, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45761-DAP: Plaintiff Newark City, New Jersey

Newark City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Newark City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Newark City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Newark City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Newark City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Newark City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Newark City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Newark City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Newark City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Newark City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Newark City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Newark City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Newark City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. units shipped to Newark City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.09% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Newark City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Newark City filed its original complaint on May 10, 2018. See City of Newark, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45761-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Newark City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Newark City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Newark City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. 654. Hancock County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45762-DAP: Plaintiff Hancock County, Mississippi

Hancock County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hancock County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hancock County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hancock County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Hancock County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Hancock County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Hancock County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Hancock County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2018, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—six years and three months later. See Hancock County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45762-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). 655. City of Henderson v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45768-DAP: Plaintiff Henderson City, North Carolina

Henderson City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Henderson City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Henderson City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Henderson City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Henderson City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al.*, Case No. 1:18-op-45768-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Henderson City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Henderson City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Henderson City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Henderson City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Henderson City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Henderson City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. It is therefore indisputable that Henderson City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Henderson City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period.

ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Henderson City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Henderson City, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

656. Town of Somerset, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45769-DAP: Plaintiff Somerset Town, Massachusetts

Somerset Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Somerset Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Somerset Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Somerset Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Somerset Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Somerset Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Somerset Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 2, 2018. See Town of Somerset, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45769-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Somerset Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Somerset Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Somerset Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Somerset Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Somerset Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Somerset Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Somerset Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the "plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint"); Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Decl. (0.01% market share for Somerset Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Somerset Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Somerset Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.18% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Somerset Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Somerset Town filed its original complaint on June 5, 2018. See Town of Somerset, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45769-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Somerset Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Somerset Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Somerset Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Somerset Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Somerset Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Somerset Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Somerset Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Somerset Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Somerset Town filed its original complaint on June 5, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Somerset, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45769-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Somerset Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Somerset Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Somerset Town's request for leave to amend to add a

RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Somerset Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Somerset Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 5, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Somerset Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

657. Town of Tyngsborough, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45770-DAP: Plaintiff Tyngsborough Town, Massachusetts

Tyngsborough Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Tyngsborough Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Tyngsborough Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Tyngsborough Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Tyngsborough Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Tyngsborough Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Tyngsborough Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 2, 2018. See Town of Tyngsborough, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45770-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Tyngsborough Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Tyngsborough Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Tyngsborough Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Tyngsborough Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Parma Heights City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Parma Heights City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Parma Heights City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Parma Heights City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Parma Heights City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Parma Heights City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Parma Heights City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 2, 2018. See City of Parma Heights v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45773-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Parma Heights City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Parma Heights City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Parma Heights City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Parma Heights City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Parma Heights City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Parma Heights City—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Parma Heights City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Parma Heights City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Parma Heights City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Parma Heights City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Parma Heights City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Parma Heights City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Parma Heights City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Parma Heights City's potential claims against them. Parma Heights City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Parma Heights City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Parma Heights City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Parma Heights City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Parma Heights City’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Parma Heights City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Parma Heights City filed its amended complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Parma Heights v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45773-DAP, ECF No. 4. It is therefore indisputable that Parma Heights City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Parma Heights City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Parma Heights City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Parma Heights City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

659. Iredell County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45774-DAP: Plaintiff Iredell County, North Carolina

Iredell County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Iredell County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Iredell County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Iredell County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Iredell County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Iredell County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Iredell County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 3, 2018. See Iredell County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45774-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Iredell County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Iredell County's deadline to amend was in 2019.

Iredell County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Iredell County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Iredell County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Iredell County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Iredell County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Iredell County filed its original complaint on June 4, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Iredell County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45774-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Iredell County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Iredell County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Iredell County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Iredell County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

660. Stone County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45775-DAP: Plaintiff Stone County, Mississippi

Stone County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Stone County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Stone County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Stone County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Stone County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Stone County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Stone County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 3, 2018. See Stone County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45775-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Stone County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Stone County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Stone County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Stone County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Stone County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Stone County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Stone County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Stone County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for Stone County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Stone County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Stone County filed its original complaint on May 23, 2018. See Stone County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45775-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Stone County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Stone County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Stone County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Stone County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Stone County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Stone County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Stone County, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Stone County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Stone County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, et al., No. 1:18-op-45775-DAP; and Stone County, Mississippi v. McKesson Corporation, et al., No. 1:20-op-45168-DAP. Stone County’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Stone County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Stone County filed its amended complaint on March 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Stone County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45775-DAP, ECF No. 6. It is therefore indisputable that Stone County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Stone County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Stone County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Stone County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

661. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Santa Fe v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45776-DAP: Plaintiff Santa Fe County, New Mexico

Santa Fe County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Santa Fe County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Santa Fe County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Santa Fe County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Santa Fe County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Santa Fe County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Santa Fe County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 5, 2018, as well as on July 14, 2021. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Santa Fe v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45776-DAP, ECF Nos. 7, 28. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Santa Fe County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Santa Fe County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Santa Fe County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Santa Fe County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Santa Fe County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Santa Fe County, a municipality in New Mexico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Santa Fe County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Santa Fe County filed its original complaint on June 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Santa Fe v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45776-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Santa Fe County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Santa Fe County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Santa Fe County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Santa Fe County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

662. Worth County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45777-DAP: Plaintiff Worth County, Missouri

Worth County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Worth County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Worth County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Worth County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Worth County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Worth County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Worth County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 5, 2018. See Worth County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45777-DAP, ECF No. 22. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Worth County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Worth County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Worth County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Worth County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Worth County's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Worth County cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Worth County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.32% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Worth County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Worth County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2018. See Worth County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45777-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Worth County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Worth County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Worth County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Worth County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Worth County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Worth County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Worth County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Worth County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Worth County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Worth County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45777-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Worth County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Worth County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Worth County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

663. Perry County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45778-DAP: Plaintiff Perry County, Mississippi

Perry County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Perry County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Perry County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Perry County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Perry County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Perry County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Perry County amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 5, 2018. See Perry County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45778-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Perry County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Perry County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Perry County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Perry County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Perry County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Perry County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Perry County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Perry County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Perry County filed its original complaint on May 23, 2018, but waited until September 25, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—six years and four months later. See Perry County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45778-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 25, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Perry County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Perry County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Perry County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Perry County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Perry County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Perry County, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Perry County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Perry County filed its amended complaint on March 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Perry County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45778-DAP, ECF No. 7. It is therefore indisputable that Perry County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Perry County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Perry County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

664. Montgomery County, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45780-DAP: Plaintiff Montgomery County, Kansas

Montgomery County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Montgomery County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Montgomery County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Montgomery

County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Montgomery County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Montgomery County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Montgomery County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 5, 2018. See Montgomery County, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45780-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Montgomery County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Montgomery County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Montgomery County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Montgomery County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Montgomery County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.09% market share for Montgomery County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Montgomery County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Montgomery County filed its original complaint on June 11, 2018. See Montgomery County, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45780-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Montgomery County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Montgomery County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Montgomery County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Montgomery County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Montgomery County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Montgomery County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Montgomery County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Montgomery County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Montgomery County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Montgomery County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Montgomery County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Montgomery County's potential claims against them. Montgomery County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kansas law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Montgomery County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kansas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Montgomery County, a municipality in Kansas, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Montgomery County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Montgomery County filed its original complaint on June 11, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Montgomery County, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45780-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Montgomery County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Montgomery County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Montgomery County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Montgomery County, a municipality in Kansas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

665. Bourbon County, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45781-DAP: Plaintiff Bourbon County, Kansas

Bourbon County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bourbon County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bourbon County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bourbon County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Bourbon County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bourbon County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bourbon County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 5, 2018. See Bourbon County, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45781-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bourbon County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Bourbon County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Bourbon County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bourbon County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Bourbon County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Bourbon County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bourbon County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Decl., Exhibit C (0.42% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bourbon County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Bourbon County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2018. See Bourbon County, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45781-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Bourbon County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Bourbon County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Bourbon County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Bourbon County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Bourbon County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Bourbon County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Bourbon County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Bourbon County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Bourbon County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Bourbon County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Bourbon County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Bourbon County's potential claims against them. Bourbon County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kansas law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bourbon County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kansas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bourbon County, a municipality in Kansas, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bourbon County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bourbon County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Bourbon County, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45781-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Bourbon County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Bourbon County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bourbon County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bourbon County, a municipality in Kansas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

666. County of Volusia, Florida v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45782-DAP: Plaintiff Volusia County, Florida

Volusia County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Volusia County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Volusia County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Volusia County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Volusia County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Volusia County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Volusia County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 5, 2018. See County of Volusia, Florida v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45782-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Volusia County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Volusia County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Volusia County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Volusia County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Volusia County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A., and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Volusia County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Volusia County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the "plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint"); Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

low to support a finding of good cause for Volusia County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Volusia County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Volusia County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Volusia County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Volusia County filed its original complaint on June 15, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Volusia, Florida v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45782-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Volusia County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Volusia County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Volusia County's request for leave to amend to add a

RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Volusia County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Volusia County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 15, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Volusia County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

667. Town of Milford, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45783-DAP: Plaintiff Milford Town, Massachusetts

Milford Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Milford Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Milford Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Milford Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Milford Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Milford Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Milford Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 6, 2018. See Town of Milford, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45783-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Milford Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Milford Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Prior Notice Through Counsel. Milford Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Milford Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Milford Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Milford Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Milford Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Milford Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Milford Town filed its original complaint on June 11, 2018. See Town of Milford, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45783-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Milford Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Milford Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Milford Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Milford Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Milford Town filed its original complaint on June 11, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Town of Milford, Massachusetts v. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Milford Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Milford Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Milford Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 11, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Milford Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

668. Town of Munford, Alabama v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45785-DAP: Plaintiff Munford Town, Alabama

Munford Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Munford Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Munford Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Munford Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Munford Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Munford Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Munford Town amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 6, 2018. See Town of Munford, Alabama v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45785-DAP, ECF No. 26. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Munford Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Munford Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Munford Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Munford Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Munford Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Munford Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Munford Town filed its original complaint on May 29, 2018. See Town of Munford, Alabama v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45785-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Munford Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). The PBMs are prejudiced by Munford Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Munford Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Munford Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Munford Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Munford Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Munford Town filed its original complaint on May 29, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Munford, Alabama v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45785-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Munford Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Munford Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Munford Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Munford Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Munford Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 29, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Munford Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

669. City of Lincoln, Alabama v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45786-DAP: Plaintiff Lincoln City, Alabama

Lincoln City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lincoln City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lincoln City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lincoln City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lincoln City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lincoln City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lincoln City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 6, 2018. See City of Lincoln, Alabama v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45786-DAP, ECF No. 27. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lincoln City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lincoln City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Lincoln City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lincoln City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lincoln City filed its original complaint on May 29, 2018. See City of Lincoln, Alabama v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45786-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lincoln City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Lincoln City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lincoln City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lincoln City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lincoln City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lincoln City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lincoln City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lincoln City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lincoln City filed its original complaint on May 29, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Lincoln, Alabama v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45786-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lincoln City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Lincoln City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lincoln City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Lincoln City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Lincoln City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 29, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lincoln City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

670. Town of Norton, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45787-DAP: Plaintiff Norton Town, Massachusetts

Norton Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Norton Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Norton Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Norton Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Norton Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Norton Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Norton Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 6, 2018. See Town of Norton, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45787-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Norton Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Norton Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Norton Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Norton Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Norton Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Norton Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Norton Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Norton Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.13% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Norton Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Norton Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Norton Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Norton Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Norton Town filed its original complaint on June 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Norton, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45787-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Norton Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Norton Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Norton Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Norton Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

671. City of Sandusky v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45788-DAP: Plaintiff Sandusky City, Ohio

Sandusky City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sandusky City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sandusky City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sandusky City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sandusky City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sandusky City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sandusky City filed its original complaint on July 9, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL. See City of Sandusky v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45788-DAP, ECF No. 1. Sandusky City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sandusky City elected not to do so. Instead, Sandusky City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sandusky City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sandusky City filed its original complaint on July 9, 2018. See City of Sandusky v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45788-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sandusky City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Sandusky City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sandusky City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sandusky City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sandusky City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sandusky City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sandusky City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sandusky City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sandusky City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Sandusky City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sandusky City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Sandusky City’s potential claims against them. Sandusky City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sandusky City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sandusky City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Sandusky City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Sandusky City’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sandusky City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sandusky City filed its original complaint on June 6, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Sandusky v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45788-DAP, ECF

No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Sandusky City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on June 6, 2022. Sandusky City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sandusky City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sandusky City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

672. City of Lynn, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45789-DAP: Plaintiff Lynn City, Massachusetts

Lynn City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lynn City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lynn City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lynn City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lynn City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Moreover, Lynn City amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 10, 2018. See City of Lynn, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45789-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lynn City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lynn City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lynn City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lynn City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Lynn City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Lynn City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Lynn City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lynn City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Lynn City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.10% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lynn City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lynn City filed its original complaint on June 11, 2018. See City of Lynn, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45789-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lynn City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lynn City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lynn City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Lynn City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Lynn City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 11, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lynn City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

673. Town of West Tisbury, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45790-DAP: Plaintiff West Tisbury Town, Massachusetts

West Tisbury Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. West Tisbury Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. West Tisbury Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, West Tisbury Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as West Tisbury Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. West Tisbury Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Prior Notice Through Counsel. West Tisbury Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. West Tisbury Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. West Tisbury Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to West Tisbury Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, West Tisbury Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. West Tisbury Town filed its original complaint on June 12, 2018. See Town of West Tisbury, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45790-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, West Tisbury Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455.

Litigating West Tisbury Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of West Tisbury Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by West Tisbury Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and West Tisbury Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But West Tisbury Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. West Tisbury Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for West Tisbury Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. West Tisbury Town filed its original complaint on June 12, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of West Tisbury, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45790-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that West Tisbury Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. West Tisbury Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. West Tisbury Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. West Tisbury Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because West Tisbury Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 12, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. West Tisbury Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

674. Town of Marblehead, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45791-DAP: Plaintiff Marblehead Town, Massachusetts

Marblehead Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Marblehead Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Marblehead Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Marblehead Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Marblehead Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Marblehead Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Marblehead Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 10, 2018. See Town of Marblehead, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45791-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Marblehead Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Marblehead Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Marblehead Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Marblehead Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Marblehead Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Marblehead Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Marblehead Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Marblehead Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.002% market share for Marblehead Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Marblehead Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Marblehead Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.09% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Marblehead Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Marblehead Town filed its original complaint on June 8, 2018. See Town of Marblehead, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45791-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Marblehead Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Marblehead Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Marblehead Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Marblehead Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Marblehead Town filed its original complaint on June 8, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Town of Marblehead, Massachusetts v. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Marblehead Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

675. Holmes County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45793-DAP: Plaintiff Holmes County, Mississippi

Holmes County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Holmes County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Holmes County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Holmes County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Holmes County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Holmes County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Holmes County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 10, 2018. See Holmes County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45793-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Holmes County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Holmes County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Holmes County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Holmes County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Holmes County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Holmes County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Holmes County’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Holmes County cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

units shipped to Holmes County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.10% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Holmes County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Holmes County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Holmes County filed its original complaint on June 20, 2018, but waited until December 14, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—one and a half years later. See Holmes County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45793-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 14, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Holmes County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Holmes County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Holmes County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Holmes County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Holmes County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Holmes County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Holmes County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Holmes County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Holmes County's potential claims against them. Holmes County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Holmes County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Holmes County, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Holmes County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Holmes County filed its amended complaint on March 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Holmes County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45793-DAP, ECF No. 8. It is therefore indisputable that Holmes County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Holmes County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Holmes County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Holmes County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

676. Nodaway County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45795-DAP: Plaintiff Nodaway County, Missouri

Nodaway County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Nodaway County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Nodaway County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Nodaway County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Nodaway County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

on July 10, 2018. See Nodaway County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45795-DAP, ECF No. 20. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Nodaway County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Nodaway County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Nodaway County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Nodaway County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

(0.10% market share for Nodaway County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Nodaway County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Nodaway County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2018. See Nodaway County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45795-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Nodaway County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Nodaway County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Atchison County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Atchison County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Moreover, Atchison County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 10, 2018. See Atchison County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45797-DAP, ECF No. 22. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Atchison County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Atchison County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Atchison County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Atchison County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Atchison County's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Atchison County cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Atchison County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2018. See Atchison County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45797-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Atchison County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Atchison County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Atchison County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Atchison County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Atchison County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Atchison County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Atchison County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Atchison County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Atchison County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Atchison County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Atchison County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Atchison County’s potential claims against them. Atchison County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Atchison County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Atchison County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Atchison County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Atchison County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Atchison County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45797-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Atchison County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Atchison County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Atchison County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Atchison County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

678. City of Saint Joseph, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45798-DAP: Plaintiff St. Joseph City, Missouri

St. Joseph City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Joseph City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Joseph City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. Joseph City's motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Joseph City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. St. Joseph City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, St. Joseph City amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 10, 2018. See City of Saint Joseph, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45798-DAP, ECF No. 22. Unlike many other plaintiffs, St. Joseph City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. St. Joseph City's deadline to amend was in 2019. denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to St. Joseph City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for St. Joseph City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Joseph City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to St. Joseph City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.28% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Joseph City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. St. Joseph City filed its original complaint on June 13, 2018. See City of Saint Joseph, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45798-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, St. Joseph City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating St. Joseph City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of St. Joseph City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by St. Joseph City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and St. Joseph City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Under this Court's orders, St. Joseph City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. Joseph City, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

679. Rowan County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45799-DAP: Plaintiff Rowan County, North Carolina

Rowan County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rowan County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rowan County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rowan County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Rowan County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Rowan County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Rowan County amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 10, 2018. See Rowan County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45799-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Rowan County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Rowan County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Rowan County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Rowan County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Rowan County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Rowan County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Rowan County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Rowan County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.14% market share for Rowan County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Rowan County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Rowan County filed its original complaint on June 20, 2018. See Rowan County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45799-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Rowan County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Rowan County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Rowan County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Rowan County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Rowan County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Rowan County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Rowan County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Rowan County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Rowan County filed its original complaint on June 20, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Rowan County v. Rowan County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Rowan County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

680. City of Lakewood, CO et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45800-DAP: Plaintiff Wheat Ridge City, Colorado

Wheat Ridge City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wheat Ridge City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wheat Ridge City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wheat Ridge City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wheat Ridge City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wheat Ridge City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wheat Ridge City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 10, 2018. See City of Lakewood, CO et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45800-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wheat Ridge City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Wheat Ridge City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Wheat Ridge City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wheat Ridge City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Wheat Ridge City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Wheat Ridge City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Wheat Ridge City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close (0.06% market share for Wheat Ridge City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Wheat Ridge City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wheat Ridge City filed its original complaint on June 8, 2018. See City of Lakewood, CO et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45800-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wheat Ridge City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wheat Ridge City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wheat Ridge City, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Wheat Ridge City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Wheat Ridge City filed its amended complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Lakewood, CO et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45800-DAP, ECF No. 8. It is therefore indisputable that Wheat Ridge City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Wheat Ridge City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wheat Ridge City, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

681. Dane County, Wisconsin v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45802-DAP: Plaintiff Dane County, Wisconsin

Dane County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dane County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dane County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dane County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Dane County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dane County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Dane County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 10, 2018. See Dane County, Wisconsin v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45802-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Dane County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Dane County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Dane County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Dane County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Dane County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Dane County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Dane County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Decl. (0.04% market share for Dane County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Dane County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Dane County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.16% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Dane County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Dane County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Dane County, a municipality in Wisconsin, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Dane County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Dane County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See

Dane County, Wisconsin v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45802-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Dane County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Dane County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Dane County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Dane County, a municipality in Wisconsin, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

682. Pike County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45803-DAP: Plaintiff Pike County, Alabama

Pike County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pike County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pike County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pike County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Pike County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pike County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pike County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 11, 2018. See Pike County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45803-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pike County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Pike County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Pike County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pike County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Pike County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Pike County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Pike County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Pike County filed its original complaint on June 15, 2018. See Pike County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45803-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Pike County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Pike County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Pike County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Pike County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Pike County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pike County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pike County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Pike County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Pike County filed its original complaint on June 15, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Pike County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45803-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Pike County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Pike County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Pike County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Pike County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Pike County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 15, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pike County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pike County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

683. City of Pinellas Park v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45807-DAP: Plaintiff Pinellas Park City, Florida

Pinellas Park City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pinellas Park City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pinellas Park City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pinellas Park City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Pinellas Park City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pinellas Park City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pinellas Park City amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 11, 2018. See City of Pinellas Park v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45807-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pinellas Park City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Pinellas Park City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Pinellas Park City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pinellas Park City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Pinellas Park City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A., and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Pinellas Park City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Pinellas Park City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Pinellas Park City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.25% market share for Pinellas Park City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pinellas Park City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Pinellas Park City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Pinellas Park City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Pinellas Park City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Pinellas Park City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Pinellas Park City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Pinellas Park City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Pinellas Park City's potential claims against them. Pinellas Park City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pinellas Park City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pinellas Park City, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Pinellas Park City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Pinellas Park City filed its original complaint on June 15, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Pinellas Park v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45807-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Pinellas Park City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Pinellas Park City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Pinellas Park City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Pinellas Park City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Pinellas Park City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 15, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pinellas Park City, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

684. Town of Plainville, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45808-DAP: Plaintiff Plainville Town, Massachusetts

Plainville Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Plainville Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Plainville Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Plainville Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Plainville Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Plainville Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Plainville Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 11, 2018. See Town of Plainville, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45808-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Plainville Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Plainville Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Plainville Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Plainville Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Plainville Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Plainville Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Plainville Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Plainville Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Plainville Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

a finding of good cause for Plainville Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Plainville Town filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018. See Town of Plainville, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45808-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Plainville Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Plainville Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Plainville Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Plainville Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Plainville Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Plainville Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Plainville Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Plainville Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Plainville Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Plainville Town's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Plainville Town's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Plainville Town's potential claims against them. Plainville Town's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Plainville Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Plainville Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Plainville Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Plainville Town filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Plainville, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45808-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Plainville Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Plainville Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Plainville Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Plainville Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Plainville Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 31, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Plainville Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

685. Town of Spencer, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45809-DAP: Plaintiff Spencer Town, Massachusetts

Spencer Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Spencer Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Spencer Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Spencer Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Spencer Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Spencer Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Spencer Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 11, 2018. See Town of Spencer, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45809-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Spencer Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Spencer Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Spencer Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Spencer Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Spencer Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Spencer Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Spencer Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs

in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Spencer Town filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018. See Town of Spencer, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45809-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Spencer Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See

ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Spencer Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Spencer Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Spencer Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Spencer Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Spencer Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Spencer Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Spencer Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Spencer Town filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Spencer, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45809-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Spencer Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Spencer Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Spencer Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Sutton Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sutton Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sutton Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to

Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al.*, Case No. 1:18-op-45810-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sutton Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Sutton Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sutton Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. 687. Town of Warren, Massachusetts, et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45811-DAP: Plaintiff Warren Town, Massachusetts

Warren Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Warren Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Warren Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Warren Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Warren Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred

App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Warren Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Warren Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Warren Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

688. Town of West Springfield, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45813-DAP: Plaintiff West Springfield Town City, Massachusetts

West Springfield Town City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. West Springfield Town City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. West Springfield Town City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, West Springfield Town City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as West Springfield Town City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its

It is therefore indisputable that West Springfield Town City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. West Springfield Town City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. West Springfield Town City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. West Springfield Town City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because West Springfield Town City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 31, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. West Springfield Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

689. Town of Winthrop, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45814-DAP: Plaintiff Winthrop Town City, Massachusetts

Winthrop Town City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Winthrop Town City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Winthrop Town City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Winthrop Town City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Winthrop Town City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Winthrop Town City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Winthrop Town City amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 11, 2018. See Town of Winthrop, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45814-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Winthrop Town City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Winthrop Town City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Winthrop Town City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Winthrop Town City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Winthrop Town City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Winthrop Town City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Winthrop Town City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Winthrop Town City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Winthrop Town City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Winthrop Town City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Winthrop Town City filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018. See Town of Winthrop, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45814-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Winthrop Town City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Winthrop Town City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Winthrop Town City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Winthrop Town City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Winthrop Town City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Winthrop Town City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Winthrop Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Winthrop Town City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Winthrop Town City filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Winthrop, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45814-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Winthrop Town City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Winthrop Town City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Winthrop Town City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Winthrop Town City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Winthrop Town City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 31, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Winthrop Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

690. Town of Norwell, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45815-DAP: Plaintiff Norwell Town, Massachusetts

Norwell Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Norwell Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Norwell Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Norwell Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Norwell Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Norwell Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Norwell Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 11, 2018. See Town of Norwell, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45815-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Norwell Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Norwell Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Norwell Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Norwell Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Norwell Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Norwell Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Norwell Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Norwell Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Norwell Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Norwell Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.33% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Norwell Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Norwell Town filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018. See Town of Norwell, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45815-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Norwell Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Norwell Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Norwell Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Norwell Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Norwell Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Norwell Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Norwell Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Norwell Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Norwell Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Norwell Town's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Norwell Town's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Norwell Town's potential claims against them. Norwell Town's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Norwell Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Norwell Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Norwell Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Norwell Town filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Norwell, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45815-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Norwell Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Norwell Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Norwell Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Norwell Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Norwell Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 31, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Norwell Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

691. Town of Truro, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45816-DAP: Plaintiff Truro Town, Massachusetts

Truro Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Truro Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Truro Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Truro Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Truro Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Truro Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Truro Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 11, 2018. See Town of Truro, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45816-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Truro Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Truro Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Truro Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Truro Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Truro Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Truro Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Truro Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Truro Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Truro Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Truro Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Truro Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Truro Town filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018. See Town of Truro, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45816-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Truro Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Truro Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Truro Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Truro Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Truro Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Truro Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Truro Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Truro Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Truro Town filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Truro, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45816-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Truro Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Truro Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Truro Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Truro Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Truro Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 31, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Truro Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

692. Cobb County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45817-DAP: Plaintiff Cobb County, Georgia

Cobb County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cobb County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cobb County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cobb County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Cobb County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cobb County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Cobb County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 11, 2018, as well as on July 14, 2021. See Cobb County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45817-DAP, ECF Nos. 6, 22. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cobb County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Cobb County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Cobb County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cobb County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Cobb County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Cobb County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Cobb County began receiving those services on March 1, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Cobb County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Cobb County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Cobb County’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Cobb County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Cobb County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2018, but waited until May 13, 2021 to implement a litigation hold—nearly three years later. See Cobb County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45817-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: May 13, 2021). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Cobb County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Cobb County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Cobb County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Cobb County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Cobb County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Cobb County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Cobb County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Cobb County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Cobb County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45817-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Cobb County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Cobb County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Cobb County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Cobb County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

693. Town of Middletown, Rhode Island v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45818-DAP: Plaintiff Middletown Town, Rhode Island

Middletown Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Middletown Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Middletown Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Middletown Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Middletown Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Middletown Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Middletown Town amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 11, 2018. See Town of Middletown, Rhode Island v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45818-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Middletown Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Middletown Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Middletown Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Middletown Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704

F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Middletown Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Middletown Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Middletown Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

units shipped to Middletown Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.10% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Middletown Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Middletown Town filed its original complaint on June 13, 2018. See Town of Middletown, Rhode Island v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45818-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Middletown Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Middletown Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Middletown Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Middletown Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Middletown Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Rhode Island law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Middletown Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Rhode Island law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Middletown Town, a municipality in Rhode Island, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. 694. Bon Secours Health System, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45820-DAP: Plaintiff Chesapeake Hospital Corporation, Virginia

Chesapeake Hospital Corporation’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chesapeake Hospital Corporation failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chesapeake Hospital Corporation also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chesapeake Hospital Corporation's motion should be denied due to futility, as Chesapeake Hospital Corporation does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chesapeake Hospital Corporation was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Hospital Corporation never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Chesapeake Hospital Corporation's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Chesapeake Hospital Corporation's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. 695. Bon Secours Health System, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45820-DAP: Plaintiff Mary Immaculate Hospital, Incorporated, Virginia

Mary Immaculate Hospital, Incorporated's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mary Immaculate Hospital, Incorporated failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mary Immaculate Hospital, Incorporated also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mary Immaculate Hospital, Incorporated's motion should be denied due to futility, as Mary Maryview Hospital's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Maryview Hospital failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Maryview Hospital also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Maryview Hospital's motion should be denied due to futility, as Maryview Hospital does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

697. Bon Secours Health System, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45820-DAP: Plaintiff Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc., Virginia

Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc.'s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc.'s deadline to amend was in 2019. Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc. waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc.’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc. filed its original complaint on July 12, 2018. See Bon Secours Health System, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45820-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc. never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc.’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc.’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc.’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc. therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc.’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc., a hospital in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc.’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc. filed its original complaint on July 12, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Bon Secours Health System, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45820-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc. knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc.’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc.’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc., a hospital in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

698. Bon Secours Health System, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45820-DAP: Plaintiff Richmond Community Hospital, Incorporated, Virginia

Richmond Community Hospital, Incorporated's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Richmond Community Hospital, Incorporated failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Richmond Community Hospital, Incorporated also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Richmond Community Hospital, Incorporated's motion should be denied due to futility, as Richmond Community Hospital, Incorporated does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Richmond Community Hospital, Incorporated was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Richmond Community Hospital, Incorporated amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Bon Secours Health System, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45820-DAP, ECF No. 22. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Richmond Community Hospital, Incorporated declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Richmond Community Hospital, Incorporated's deadline to amend was in 2019. Richmond Community Hospital, Incorporated waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Richmond Community Hospital, Incorporated's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

700. Bon Secours Health System, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45820-DAP: Plaintiff St. Mary’s Hospital of Richmond, Inc., Virginia

St. Mary’s Hospital of Richmond, Inc.’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Mary’s Hospital of Richmond, Inc. failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Mary's Hospital of Richmond, Inc. also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. Mary's Hospital of Richmond, Inc.'s motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Mary's Hospital of Richmond, Inc. does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

701. Bon Secours Health System, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45821-DAP: Plaintiff St. Francis Hospital, Inc., South Carolina

St. Francis Hospital, Inc.'s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Francis Hospital, Inc. failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Francis Hospital, Inc. also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. Francis Hospital, Inc.’s motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Francis Hospital, Inc. does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. St. Francis Hospital, Inc. was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. St. Francis Hospital, Inc.’s deadline to amend was in 2019. St. Francis Hospital, Inc. waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. St. Francis Hospital, Inc.’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. St. Francis Hospital, Inc. previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified St. Francis Hospital, Inc. of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and St. Francis Hospital, Inc. began receiving those services on July 14, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as St. Francis Hospital, Inc. seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), St. Francis Hospital, Inc. knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. St. Francis Hospital, Inc.’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. St. Francis Hospital, Inc. filed its original complaint on July 12, 2018. *See Bon Secours Health System, Inc. et al. v. Despite filing its case years ago, St. Francis Hospital, Inc. never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating St. Francis Hospital, Inc.’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of St. Francis Hospital, Inc.’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under South Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But St. Francis Hospital, Inc.’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under South Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. St. Francis Hospital, Inc., a hospital in South Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for St. Francis Hospital, Inc.'s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. St. Francis Hospital, Inc. filed its original complaint on July 12, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Bon Secours Health System, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45821-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that St. Francis Hospital, Inc. knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. St. Francis Hospital, Inc.'s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. St. Francis Hospital, Inc.'s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. Francis Hospital, Inc., a hospital in South Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

702. Town of Pembroke, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45823-DAP: Plaintiff Pembroke Town, Massachusetts

Pembroke Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pembroke Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pembroke Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pembroke Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Pembroke Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pembroke Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pembroke Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 13, 2018. See Town of Pembroke, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45823-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pembroke Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Pembroke Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Pembroke Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pembroke Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Pembroke Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; and Bardon & Budd, P.C.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Pembroke Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Pembroke Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

support a finding of good cause for Pembroke Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pembroke Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pembroke Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Pembroke Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Pembroke Town filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Pembroke, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45823-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Pembroke Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Pembroke Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Pembroke Town's request for leave to amend to add a

RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Pembroke Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Pembroke Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 31, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pembroke Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

703. Town of Rockland, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45824-DAP: Plaintiff Rockland Town, Massachusetts

Rockland Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rockland Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rockland Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rockland Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Rockland Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Rockland Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Rockland Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 13, 2018. See Town of Rockland, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45824-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Rockland Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Rockland Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Rockland Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Rockland Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Rockland Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; and Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Rockland Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Rockland Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Rockland Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Rockland Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Rockland Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Rockland Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.17% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Rockland Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Rockland Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Rockland Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

704. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45825-DAP: Plaintiff Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana, Louisiana

Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana amended its complaint on August 12, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45825-DAP, ECF No. 26. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana began receiving those services on January 1, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana filed its original complaint on July 16, 2018. See Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45825-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Louisiana law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Louisiana law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana, a native tribe in Louisiana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana filed its original complaint on July 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45825-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Louisiana, public-nuisance claims are subject to an one-year limitations period. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 16, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana, a native tribe in Louisiana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

705. San Juan County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45829-DAP: Plaintiff San Juan County, New Mexico

San Juan County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. San Juan County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. San Juan County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, San Juan County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as San Juan County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. San Juan County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, San Juan County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 17, 2018. See San Juan County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45829-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, San Juan County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. San Juan County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. San Juan County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. San Juan County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to San Juan County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for San Juan County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for San Juan County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to San Juan County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.24% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for San Juan County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But San Juan County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. San Juan County, a municipality in New Mexico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for San Juan County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. San Juan County filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See San Juan County v. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. San Juan County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

706. Adams County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45831-DAP: Plaintiff Adams County, Mississippi

Adams County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Adams County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Adams County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Adams County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Adams County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Adams County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Adams County amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 18, 2018. See Adams County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45831-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Adams County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Adams County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Adams County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Adams County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Adams County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Adams County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Adams County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Adams County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Adams County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Adams County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Adams County filed its original complaint on June 22, 2018. See Adams County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45831-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Adams County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Adams County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Adams County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Adams County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Adams County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Adams County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Adams County, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Adams County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Adams County filed its amended complaint on March 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Adams County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45831-DAP, ECF No. 8. It is therefore indisputable that Adams County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Adams County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Adams County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Adams County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

707. Green Lake County et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45832-DAP: Plaintiff Green Lake County, Wisconsin

Green Lake County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Green Lake County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Green Lake County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Green Lake County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Green Lake County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Green Lake County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Green Lake County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 18, 2018. See Green Lake County et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45832-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Green Lake County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Green Lake County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Green Lake County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Green Lake County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Green Lake County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.16% market share for Green Lake County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Green Lake County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Green Lake County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Green Lake County, a municipality in Wisconsin, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Green Lake County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Green Lake County filed its original complaint on May 29, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Green Lake County et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45832-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Green Lake County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Green Lake County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Green Lake County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Green Lake County, a municipality in Wisconsin, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

708. Green Lake County et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45832-DAP: Plaintiff Taylor County, Wisconsin

Taylor County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Taylor County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Taylor County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Taylor County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Taylor County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Taylor County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Taylor County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 18, 2018. See Green Lake County et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45832-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Taylor County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Taylor County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Taylor County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Taylor County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Taylor County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson

Decl. (0.003% market share for Taylor County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Taylor County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Taylor County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.20% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Taylor County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Taylor County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Taylor County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Taylor County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Taylor County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Taylor County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Taylor County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Taylor County's potential claims against them. Taylor County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Taylor County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Taylor County, a municipality in Wisconsin, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Taylor County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Taylor County filed its original complaint on May 29, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Green Lake County et al. v. It is therefore indisputable that Taylor County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Taylor County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Taylor County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Taylor County, a municipality in Wisconsin, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

709. Green Lake County et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45832-DAP: Plaintiff Vilas County, Wisconsin

Vilas County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Vilas County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Vilas County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Vilas County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Vilas County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Vilas County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Vilas County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 18, 2018. See Green Lake County et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45832-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Vilas County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Vilas County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Vilas County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Vilas County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Vilas County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Vilas County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Vilas County filed its original complaint on May 29, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Green Lake County et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45832-DAP, ECF No. 1.

It is therefore indisputable that Vilas County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Vilas County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Vilas County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Vilas County, a municipality in Wisconsin, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

710. Town of Leverett, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45836-DAP: Plaintiff Leverett Town, Massachusetts

Leverett Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Leverett Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Leverett Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Leverett Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Leverett Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Leverett Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Leverett Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 18, 2018. See Town of Leverett, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45836-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Leverett Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Leverett Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Leverett Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Leverett Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Leverett Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; and Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Leverett Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Leverett Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Leverett Town's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Leverett Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts' PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts' PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Leverett Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts' PBM "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Leverett Town filed its original complaint on June 5, 2018. See Town of Leverett, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45836-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Leverett Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Leverett Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Leverett Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Leverett Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Leverett Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Leverett Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Leverett Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Leverett Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Leverett Town filed its original complaint on June 5, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Leverett, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45836-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Leverett Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Leverett Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Leverett Town's request for leave to amend to add a

RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Leverett Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Leverett Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 5, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Leverett Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

711. Jefferson County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45839-DAP: Plaintiff Jefferson County, Mississippi

Jefferson County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Jefferson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Jefferson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Jefferson County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Jefferson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Jefferson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Jefferson County amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 18, 2018. See Jefferson County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45839-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Jefferson County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Jefferson County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Jefferson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Jefferson County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Jefferson County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Jefferson County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Jefferson County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Jefferson County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.19% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Jefferson County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Jefferson County filed its original complaint on June 22, 2018. See Jefferson County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45839-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Jefferson County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Jefferson County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Jefferson County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Jefferson County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Jefferson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Jefferson County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Jefferson County, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Jefferson County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Jefferson County filed its amended complaint on March 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Jefferson County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45839-DAP, ECF No. 8. It is therefore indisputable that Jefferson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Jefferson County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Jefferson County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Jefferson County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

712. Lafayette County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45840-DAP: Plaintiff Lafayette County, Missouri

Lafayette County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lafayette County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lafayette County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lafayette County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lafayette County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lafayette County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lafayette County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 19, 2018. See Lafayette County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45840-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lafayette County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lafayette County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lafayette County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lafayette County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Lafayette County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Lafayette County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Lafayette County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Lafayette County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Lafayette County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Lafayette County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Lafayette County's potential claims against them. Lafayette County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lafayette County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lafayette County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Lafayette County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Lafayette County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45840-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lafayette County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Lafayette County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lafayette County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lafayette County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

713. Cass County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45841-DAP: Plaintiff Cass County, Missouri

Cass County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cass County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cass County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cass County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Cass County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cass County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Cass County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Cass County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cass County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Cass County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.13% market share for Cass County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cass County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Cass County filed its original complaint on June 26, 2018. See Cass County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45841-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Cass County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Cass County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Cass County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Cass County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Cass County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Cass County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

714. Neshoba County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45843-DAP: Plaintiff Neshoba County, Mississippi

Neshoba County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Neshoba County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Neshoba County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Neshoba County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Neshoba County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Neshoba County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Neshoba County amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 19, 2018. See Neshoba County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45843-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Neshoba County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Neshoba County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Neshoba County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Neshoba County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Neshoba County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Neshoba County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Neshoba County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the "plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Neshoba County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Neshoba County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Neshoba County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Neshoba County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.21% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Neshoba County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Neshoba County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Neshoba County, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Neshoba County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Neshoba County filed its amended complaint on March 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Neshoba County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45843-DAP, ECF No. 7. It is therefore indisputable that Neshoba County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Neshoba County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Neshoba County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Neshoba County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

715. City of Providence, Rhode Island v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45844-DAP: Plaintiff Providence City, Rhode Island

Providence City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Providence City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Providence City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Providence City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Providence City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Providence City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Providence City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 19, 2018. See City of Providence, Rhode Island v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45844-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Providence City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Providence City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Providence City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Providence City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Providence City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Providence City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Providence City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Providence City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Providence City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Providence City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Providence City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.05% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Providence City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Providence City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Providence City filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018, but waited until September 5, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—five years and three months later. See City of Providence, Rhode Island v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45844-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 5, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Providence City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Providence City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Providence City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Providence City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Rhode Island law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Providence City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Rhode Island law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Providence City, a municipality in Rhode Island, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Providence City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Providence City filed its amended complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Providence, Rhode Island v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45844-DAP, ECF No. 6. It is therefore indisputable that Providence City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Providence City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Providence City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Providence City, a municipality in Rhode Island, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

716. Columbus County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45847-DAP: Plaintiff Columbus County, North Carolina

Columbus County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Columbus County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Columbus County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Columbus County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Columbus County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Columbus County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Columbus County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 19, 2018. See Columbus County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45847-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Columbus County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Columbus County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Columbus County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Columbus County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Columbus County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Columbus County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Columbus County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Columbus County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Columbus County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Columbus County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Columbus County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.18% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Columbus County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Columbus County filed its original complaint on June 22, 2018, but waited until November 15, 2018 to implement a litigation hold. See Columbus County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45847-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: November 15, 2018). Columbus County's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Columbus County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Columbus County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Columbus County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Columbus County filed its original complaint on June 22, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Columbus County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45847-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Columbus County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Columbus County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Columbus County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Columbus County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

717. Minneapolis, Minnesota v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45850-DAP: Plaintiff Minneapolis City, Minnesota

Minneapolis City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Minneapolis City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Minneapolis City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Minneapolis City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Minneapolis City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Minneapolis City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Minneapolis City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 19, 2018. See Minneapolis, Minnesota v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45850-DAP, ECF No. 28. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Minneapolis City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Minneapolis City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Minneapolis City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Minneapolis City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Minneapolis City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Minneapolis City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Minneapolis City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Minneapolis City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Minneapolis City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Minneapolis City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Minnesota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Minneapolis City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Minnesota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Minneapolis City, a municipality in Minnesota, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Minneapolis City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Minneapolis City filed its amended complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Minneapolis, Minnesota v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45850-DAP, ECF No. 28. It is therefore indisputable that Minneapolis City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Minneapolis City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Minneapolis City, a municipality in Minnesota, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

718. Pasco County, Florida v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45851-DAP: Plaintiff Pasco County, Florida

Pasco County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pasco County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pasco County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pasco County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Pasco County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pasco County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pasco County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 20, 2018. See Pasco County, Florida v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45851-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pasco County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Pasco County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Pasco County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pasco County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Pasco County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A., and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Pasco County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Pasco County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Pasco County filed its original complaint on June 27, 2018. See Pasco County, Florida v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45851-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Pasco County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Pasco County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Pasco County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Pasco County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Pasco County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pasco County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pasco County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Pasco County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Pasco County filed its original complaint on June 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See

Pasco County, Florida v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45851-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Pasco County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Pasco County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Pasco County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Pasco County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Pasco County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 27, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pasco County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

719. Cochise County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45855-DAP: Plaintiff Cochise County, Arizona

Cochise County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cochise County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cochise County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cochise County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Cochise County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cochise County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Cochise County first amended its complaint on July 20, 2018. See Cochise County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45855-DAP, ECF No. 7. Cochise County amended its complaint again on March 13, 2019, as well as on May 28, 2019. See Cochise County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45855-DAP, ECF Nos. 26, 29. Cochise County amended its complaint a fourth time on December 24, 2020. See Cochise County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45855-DAP, ECF No. 31. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cochise County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Cochise County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Cochise County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cochise County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Cochise County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.13% market share for Cochise County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cochise County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Cochise County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.38% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cochise County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Arizona law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Cochise County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Arizona law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Cochise County, a municipality in Arizona, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Cochise County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Cochise County filed its original complaint on June 29, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants.

See Cochise County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45855-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Cochise County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Cochise County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Cochise County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Cochise County, a municipality in Arizona, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

720. Town of North Reading, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45856-DAP: Plaintiff North Reading Town, Massachusetts

North Reading Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. North Reading Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. North Reading Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, North Reading Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as North Reading Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. North Reading Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above.

Moreover, North Reading Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 24, 2018. See Town of North Reading, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45856-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, North Reading Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. North Reading Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. North Reading Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. North Reading Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. North Reading Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. North Reading Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. North Reading Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to North Reading Town's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.002% market share for North Reading Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for North Reading Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to North Reading Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.10% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for North Reading Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. North Reading Town filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018. See Town of North Reading, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45856-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, North Reading Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating North Reading Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of North Reading Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by North Reading Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and North Reading Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But North Reading Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. North Reading Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for North Reading Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. North Reading Town filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of North Reading, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45856-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that North Reading Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. North Reading Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. North Reading Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. North Reading Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because North Reading Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 28, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. North Reading Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

721. Town of West Boylston, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45858-DAP: Plaintiff West Boylston Town, Massachusetts

West Boylston Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. West Boylston Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. West Boylston Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, West Boylston Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as West Boylston Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. West Boylston Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, West Boylston Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 25, 2018. See Town of West Boylston, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45858-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, West Boylston Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. West Boylston Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. West Boylston Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. West Boylston Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. West Boylston Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. West Boylston Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. West Boylston Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to West Boylston Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for West Boylston Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for West Boylston Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. West Boylston Town filed its original complaint on June 29, 2018. See Town of West Boylston, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45858-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, West Boylston Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating West Boylston Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of West Boylston Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by West Boylston Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and West Boylston Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But West Boylston Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. West Boylston Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for West Boylston Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. West Boylston Town filed its original complaint on June 29, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of West Boylston, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45858-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that West Boylston Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. West Boylston Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. West Boylston Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. West Boylston Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because West Boylston Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 29, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. West Boylston Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

722. Town of Westborough, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45859-DAP: Plaintiff Westborough Town, Massachusetts

Westborough Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Westborough Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Westborough Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Westborough Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Westborough Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Westborough Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Westborough Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 25, 2018. See Town of Westborough, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45859-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Westborough Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Westborough Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Westborough Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Westborough Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Westborough Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Westborough Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Westborough Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Westborough Town filed its original complaint on June 29, 2018. See Town of Westborough, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45859-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Westborough Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Westborough Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. 723. City of Peabody, Massachusetts, v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45860-DAP: Plaintiff Peabody City, Massachusetts

Peabody City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Peabody City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Peabody City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Peabody City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Peabody City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Peabody City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Peabody City amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 25, 2018. See City of Peabody, Massachusetts, v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45860-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Peabody City declined to add Peabody City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.002% market share for Peabody City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Peabody City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Peabody City filed its original complaint on July 5, 2018. See City of Peabody, Massachusetts, v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45860-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Peabody City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Peabody City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Peabody City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. 724. Santa Rosa County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45861-DAP: Plaintiff Santa Rosa County, Florida

Santa Rosa County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Santa Rosa County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Santa Rosa County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Santa Rosa County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Santa Rosa County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Santa Rosa County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F.

App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Santa Rosa County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Santa Rosa County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Santa Rosa County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Santa Rosa County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Santa Rosa County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Santa Rosa County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Santa Rosa County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Santa Rosa County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Santa Rosa County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Santa Rosa County's potential claims against them. Santa Rosa County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Santa Rosa County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Santa Rosa County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Santa Rosa County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Santa Rosa County filed its original complaint on June 20, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Santa Rosa County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45861-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Santa Rosa County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Santa Rosa County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Santa Rosa County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Santa Rosa County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Santa Rosa County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 20, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Santa Rosa County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

725. Town of Barnstable, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45862-DAP: Plaintiff Barnstable Town City, Massachusetts

Barnstable Town City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Barnstable Town City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Barnstable Town City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover,

Barnstable Town City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Barnstable Town City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Barnstable Town City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Barnstable Town City amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 25, 2018. See Town of Barnstable, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45862-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Barnstable Town City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Barnstable Town City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Barnstable Town City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Barnstable Town City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Barnstable Town City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Barnstable Town City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Barnstable Town

City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Barnstable Town City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Barnstable Town City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Barnstable Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Barnstable Town City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Barnstable Town City filed its original complaint on July 6, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Barnstable, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45862-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Barnstable Town City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Barnstable Town City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. Barnstable Town City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Barnstable Town City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Barnstable Town City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 6, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Barnstable Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

726. Town of Eastham, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45864-DAP: Plaintiff Eastham Town, Massachusetts

Eastham Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Eastham Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Eastham Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Eastham Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Eastham Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Eastham Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Eastham Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 25, 2018. See Town of Eastham, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45864-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Eastham Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Eastham Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Eastham Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Eastham Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Eastham Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Eastham Town filed its original complaint on June 27, 2018. See Town of Eastham, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45864-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Eastham Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Eastham

Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Eastham Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Eastham Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Eastham Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. 727. City of North Miami, Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45872-DAP: Plaintiff North Miami City, Florida

North Miami City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. North Miami City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. North Miami City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly

728. Town of Holliston, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45874-DAP: Plaintiff Holliston Town, Massachusetts

Holliston Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Holliston Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Holliston Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Holliston Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Holliston Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Holliston Town's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Holliston Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Holliston Town violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Holliston Town filed its original complaint on July 6, 2018, but waited until November 4, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—two years and four months later. See Town of Holliston, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45874-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: November 4, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Holliston Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Holliston Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Holliston Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Holliston Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Holliston Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Holliston Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Holliston Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Holliston Town filed its original complaint on July 6, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Holliston, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45874-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Holliston Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Holliston Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Holliston Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Holliston Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Holliston Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 6, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Holliston Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

729. Caswell County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45875-DAP: Plaintiff Caswell County, North Carolina

Caswell County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Caswell County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Caswell County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Caswell County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Caswell County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Caswell County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Caswell County amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 25, 2018. See Caswell County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45875-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Caswell County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Caswell County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Caswell County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Caswell County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Caswell County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Caswell County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Caswell County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See,

e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Caswell County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Caswell County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. 730. Town of Sudbury, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45877-DAP: Plaintiff Sudbury Town, Massachusetts

Sudbury Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sudbury Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sudbury Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sudbury Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sudbury Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sudbury Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

731. County of Riverside et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45878-DAP: Plaintiff Riverside County, California

Riverside County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Riverside County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Riverside County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Riverside County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Riverside County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Riverside County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Riverside County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Riverside County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Riverside County began receiving those services on January 26, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Riverside County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Riverside County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Riverside County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Riverside County filed its original complaint on June 27, 2018. See County of Riverside et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45878-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Riverside County never implemented a

732. Town of Georgetown, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45879-DAP: Plaintiff Georgetown Town, Massachusetts

Georgetown Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Georgetown Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Despite filing its case years ago, Georgetown Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Georgetown Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Georgetown Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Georgetown Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Georgetown Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Georgetown Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Georgetown Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Georgetown Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Georgetown Town filed its original complaint on June 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Georgetown, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45879-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Georgetown Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Georgetown Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Georgetown Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Georgetown Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Georgetown Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 27, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Georgetown Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

733. Town of Seekonk, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45881-DAP: Plaintiff Seekonk Town, Massachusetts

Seekonk Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Seekonk Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Seekonk Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Seekonk Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Seekonk Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Seekonk Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Seekonk Town amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 26, 2018. See Town of Seekonk, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45881-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Seekonk Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Seekonk Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Seekonk Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Seekonk Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Seekonk Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Seekonk Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Seekonk Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Seekonk Town filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018. See Town of Seekonk, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45881-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Seekonk Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Seekonk Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

734. Town of Clarksburg, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45882-DAP: Plaintiff Clarksburg Town, Massachusetts

Clarksburg Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Clarksburg Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Clarksburg Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Clarksburg Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Clarksburg Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Clarksburg Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al.*, Case No. 1:18-op-45882-DAP, ECF No. 13. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Clarksburg Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section

II.A.1, above. Clarksburg Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Clarksburg Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Clarksburg Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Clarksburg Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl..

Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Clarksburg Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Clarksburg Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.11% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Clarksburg Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Clarksburg Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Clarksburg Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

735. Town of Williamsburg, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45883-DAP: Plaintiff Williamsburg Town, Massachusetts

Williamsburg Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Williamsburg Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Williamsburg Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Williamsburg Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Williamsburg Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

736. County of Washtenaw, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45886-DAP: Plaintiff Washtenaw County, Michigan

Washtenaw County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Washtenaw County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Washtenaw County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Washtenaw County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Washtenaw County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Washtenaw County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Washtenaw County, a municipality in Michigan, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

737. County of Berrien, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45887-DAP: Plaintiff Berrien County, Michigan

Berrien County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Berrien County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Berrien County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Berrien County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Berrien County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Berrien County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Berrien County amended its complaint on March 16, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See County of Berrien, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45887-DAP, ECF No. 22. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Berrien County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Berrien County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Berrien County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Berrien County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Berrien County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Berrien County, a municipality in Michigan, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Berrien County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Berrien County filed its original complaint on July 26, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See

County of Berrien, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45887-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Berrien County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Berrien County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Berrien County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Berrien County, a municipality in Michigan, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

738. County of Clinton, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45889-DAP: Plaintiff Clinton County, Michigan

Clinton County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Clinton County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Clinton County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Clinton County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Clinton County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Clinton County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.11% market share for Clinton County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Clinton County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Clinton County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Clinton County, a municipality in Michigan, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Clinton County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Clinton County filed its original complaint on July 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See County of Clinton, Michigan v. Clinton County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Clinton County, a municipality in Michigan, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

739. Town of Mattapoisett v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45890-DAP: Plaintiff Mattapoisett Town, Massachusetts

Mattapoisett Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mattapoisett Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mattapoisett Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mattapoisett Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Mattapoisett Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Mattapoissett Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Mattapoissett Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 30, 2018. See Town of Mattapoissett v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45890-DAP, ECF No. 13. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Mattapoissett Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Mattapoissett Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Mattapoissett Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Mattapoissett Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Mattapoissett Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Mattapoissett Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Mattapoissett Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Mattapoisset Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Mattapoisset Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Mattapoisset Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Mattapoisset Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Mattapoisett Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Mattapoisett Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Mattapoisett Town filed its original complaint on June 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Mattapoisett v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45890-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Mattapoisett Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Mattapoisett Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Mattapoisett Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Mattapoisett Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Mattapoisett Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 27, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Mattapoisset Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

740. Town of Sandwich, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45891-DAP: Plaintiff Sandwich Town, Massachusetts Sandwich Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sandwich Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sandwich Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sandwich Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sandwich Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sandwich Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sandwich Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 30, 2018. See Town of Sandwich, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45891-DAP, ECF No. 13. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sandwich Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sandwich Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Sandwich Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sandwich Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Sandwich Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Sandwich Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Sandwich Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Sandwich Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.04% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sandwich Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sandwich Town filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018. See Town of Sandwich, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45891-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sandwich Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sandwich Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sandwich Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sandwich Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sandwich Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sandwich Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sandwich Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sandwich Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sandwich Town filed its original complaint on May 31, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Sandwich, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45891-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sandwich Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Sandwich Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sandwich Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Sandwich Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Sandwich Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 31, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sandwich Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

741. City of Springfield, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma, L.P., et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45899-DAP: Plaintiff Springfield City, Missouri

Springfield City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Springfield City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Springfield City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Springfield City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Springfield City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Springfield City previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on May 30, 2018. See City of Springfield, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma, L.P., et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45899-DAP, ECF No. 1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Springfield City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against other PBM-related entities in 2019, but elected not to do so. See Section II.A.1, above.

Now, Springfield City seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants five years ago. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Springfield City's complaint, Springfield City already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its original complaint against the PBMs in 2018. See Section II.A, above. Springfield City was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Springfield City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Springfield City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Springfield City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Springfield City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.14% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Springfield City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Springfield City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Springfield City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Springfield City began receiving those services on January 2, 2008. See id. Inasmuch as Springfield City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Springfield City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Springfield City’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Springfield City filed its original complaint on May 30, 2018. See City of Springfield, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma, L.P., et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45899-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Springfield City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Springfield City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Springfield City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Springfield City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Springfield City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Springfield City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Springfield City, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Springfield City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Springfield City filed a complaint on May 30, 2018, alleging a RICO claim against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc. See City of Springfield, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma, L.P., et al., 1:18-op-45899-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Springfield City knew of its injury and the factual basis for its alleged RICO claim against the PBMs, at the very latest, the day it filed that complaint, six years before seeking leave to amend. Springfield City's proposed amended RICO claim against the additional PBMs it did not previously name is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of the other elements of a claim") (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555); see Section III.B.4, above. Springfield City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Springfield City, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

742. Polk County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45900-DAP: Plaintiff Polk County, North Carolina

Polk County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Polk County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Polk County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Polk County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Polk County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Polk County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Polk County amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 31, 2018. See Polk County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45900-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Polk County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Polk County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Polk County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Polk County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Polk County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Polk County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Polk County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Polk County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for Polk County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Polk County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.35% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Polk County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Polk County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Polk County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Polk County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Polk County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Polk County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Polk County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Polk County's potential claims against them. Polk County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Polk County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Polk County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Polk County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Polk County filed its original complaint on July 6, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Polk County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45900-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Polk County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Polk County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Polk County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Polk County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

743. City of Westland, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45903-DAP: Plaintiff Westland City, Michigan

Westland City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Westland City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Westland City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Westland City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Westland City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Westland City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Westland City amended its complaint on March 16, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Westland, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45903-DAP, ECF No. 22. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Westland City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Westland City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Westland City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Westland City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Westland City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for Westland City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Westland City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Westland City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Westland City, a municipality in Michigan, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

744. Town of Belchertown v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45905-DAP: Plaintiff Belchertown Town, Massachusetts

Belchertown Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Belchertown Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Belchertown Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Belchertown Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Belchertown Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Belchertown Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Belchertown Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 2, 2018. See Town of Belchertown v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45905-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Belchertown Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Belchertown Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Belchertown Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Belchertown Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459

(affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Belchertown Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. (0.003% market share for Belchertown Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Belchertown Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Belchertown Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Belchertown Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Belchertown Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Belchertown Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Belchertown Town's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Belchertown Town's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Belchertown Town's potential claims against them. Belchertown Town's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Belchertown Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Belchertown Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Belchertown Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Belchertown Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Belchertown Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 6, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Belchertown Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

745. Town of Ludlow v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45906-DAP: Plaintiff Ludlow Town, Massachusetts

Ludlow Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ludlow Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ludlow Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ludlow Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Ludlow Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ludlow Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Ludlow Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 2, 2018. See Town of Ludlow v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45906-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ludlow Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Ludlow Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Ludlow Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ludlow Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Ludlow Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Ludlow Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Ludlow Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Ludlow Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Ludlow Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Ludlow Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.05% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ludlow Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Ludlow Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Ludlow Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Ludlow Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Ludlow Town filed its original complaint on July 9, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Ludlow v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45906-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Ludlow Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Ludlow Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Ludlow Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Ludlow Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Ludlow Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 9, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ludlow Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

746. Town of Ware v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45907-DAP: Plaintiff Ware Town, Massachusetts

Ware Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ware Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ware Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs.

Moreover, Ware Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Ware Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ware Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Ware Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 2, 2018. See Town of Ware v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45907-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ware Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Ware Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Ware Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ware Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Ware Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Ware Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Ware Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Ware Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Ware Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Ware Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.07% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ware Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Ware Town filed its original complaint on July 9, 2018. See Town of Ware v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45907-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Ware Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Ware Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Ware Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Ware Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Ware Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Ware Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Ware Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Ware Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Ware Town filed its original complaint on July 9, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Ware v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45907-DAP, ECF No.

1. It is therefore indisputable that Ware Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Ware Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Ware Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Ware Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Ware Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 9, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ware Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

747. Robinson Rancheria v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45912-DAP: Plaintiff Robinson Rancheria, California

Robinson Rancheria's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Robinson Rancheria failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Robinson Rancheria also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Robinson Rancheria's motion should be denied due to futility, as Robinson Rancheria does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Robinson Rancheria was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Robinson Rancheria filed its original complaint on March 2, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 8, 2018. See Robinson Rancheria v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45912-DAP, ECF No. 25. Robinson Rancheria could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Robinson Rancheria elected not to do so. Instead, Robinson Rancheria waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Robinson Rancheria's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts' PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts' PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Robinson Rancheria's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts' PBM "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Robinson Rancheria, a native tribe in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Robinson Rancheria's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Robinson Rancheria filed its original complaint on March 2, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Robinson Rancheria v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45912-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Robinson Rancheria first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on March 2, 2022. Robinson Rancheria's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Robinson Rancheria's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Robinson Rancheria, a native tribe in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

748. Hopland Band of Pomo Indians v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45913-DAP: Plaintiff Hopland Band of Pomo Indians, California

Hopland Band of Pomo Indians' untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hopland Band of Pomo Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hopland Band of Pomo Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hopland Band of Pomo

Indians’ motion should be denied due to futility, as Hopland Band of Pomo Indians does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hopland Band of Pomo Indians was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Hopland Band of Pomo Indians could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Express Scripts' PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts' PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts' PBM "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria filed its original complaint on February 21, 2018. See Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45916-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria, a native tribe in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria filed its original complaint on February 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45916-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on February 21, 2022. Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Redwood Valley or Little River Band of Pomo Indians of the Redwood Valley Rancheria, a native tribe in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

752. Guidiville Rancheria of California v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45917-DAP: Plaintiff Guidiville Rancheria of California, California

Guidiville Rancheria of California’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Guidiville Rancheria of California failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Guidiville Rancheria of California also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Guidiville Rancheria of California’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Guidiville Rancheria of California does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Guidiville Rancheria of California was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Guidiville Rancheria of California filed its original complaint on February 13, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 8, 2018. See Guidiville Rancheria of California v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45917-DAP, ECF No. 27. Guidiville Rancheria of California could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Guidiville Rancheria of California elected not to do so. Instead, Guidiville Rancheria of California waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Guidiville Rancheria of California's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

755. Lac Courte Oreilles Band Of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45932-DAP: Plaintiff Lac Courte Oreilles Band Of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians, Wisconsin

Lac Courte Oreilles Band Of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians' untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lac Courte Oreilles Band Of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lac Courte Oreilles Band Of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lac Courte Oreilles

Band Of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians’ motion should be denied due to futility, as Lac Courte Oreilles Band Of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lac Courte Oreilles Band Of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lac Courte Oreilles Band Of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians filed its original complaint on March 16, 2018. *See Lac Courte Oreilles Band Of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians v. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lac Courte Oreilles Band Of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians' delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lac Courte Oreilles Band Of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians, a native tribe in Wisconsin, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. 756. County of Hudson v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45937-DAP: Plaintiff Hudson County, New Jersey Hudson County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hudson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hudson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hudson County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Hudson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hudson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hudson County first amended its complaint on April 26, 2018. See County of Hudson v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45937-DAP, ECF No. 1. Hudson County amended its complaint again on March 15, 2019. See County of Hudson v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45937-DAP, ECF No. 30. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hudson County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Hudson County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Hudson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hudson County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Hudson County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Hudson County filed its original complaint on April 3, 2018. See County of Hudson v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45937-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Hudson County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Hudson County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Hudson County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Hudson County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Hudson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Hudson County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Hudson County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Hudson County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Hudson County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Hudson County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Hudson County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Hudson County's potential claims against them. Hudson County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Jersey law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hudson County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Jersey law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Hudson County, a municipality in New Jersey, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Hudson County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Hudson County filed its second amended complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Hudson v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45937-DAP, ECF No. 30. It is therefore indisputable that Hudson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Hudson County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Hudson County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hudson County, a municipality in New Jersey, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

757. Humboldt County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45942-DAP: Plaintiff Humboldt County, California

Humboldt County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Humboldt County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Humboldt County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Humboldt County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Humboldt County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Humboldt County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Humboldt County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018, as well as on May 28, 2019 and December 20, 2020. See Humboldt County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45942-DAP, ECF Nos. 25, 26, 28. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Humboldt County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Humboldt County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Humboldt County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Humboldt County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Humboldt County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.15% market share for Humboldt County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Humboldt County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Humboldt County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Humboldt County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Humboldt County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Humboldt County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Humboldt County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Humboldt County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Humboldt County's potential claims against them. Humboldt County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Failure to State a Claim. Humboldt County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Humboldt County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Humboldt County filed its original complaint on July 18, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Humboldt County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45942-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Humboldt County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Humboldt County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Humboldt County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Humboldt County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

758. Spokane County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45943-DAP: Plaintiff Spokane County, Washington

Spokane County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Spokane County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Spokane County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Spokane County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Spokane County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Spokane County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Spokane County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018, as well as on May 28, 2019 and March 1, 2021. See Spokane County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45943-DAP, ECF Nos. 28, 29, 31. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Spokane County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Spokane County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Spokane County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Spokane County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Spokane County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.33% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Spokane County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Spokane County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Spokane County, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Spokane County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Spokane County filed its original complaint on June 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Spokane County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45943-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Spokane County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Spokane County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Spokane County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Spokane County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Spokane County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 21, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Spokane County, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

759. Franklin County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45944-DAP: Plaintiff Franklin County, Washington

Franklin County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Franklin County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Franklin County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Franklin County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Franklin County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Franklin County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Franklin County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018, as well as on May 28, 2019 and December 24, 2020. See Franklin County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45944-DAP, ECF Nos. 21, 22, 24. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Franklin County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Franklin County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Franklin County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Franklin County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Franklin County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Franklin County, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Franklin County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Franklin County filed its original complaint on July 11, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Franklin County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45944-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Franklin County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Franklin County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Franklin County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Franklin County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Franklin County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 11, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Franklin County, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

760. Laurens County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45945-DAP: Plaintiff Laurens County, Georgia

Laurens County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Laurens County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Laurens County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Laurens County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Laurens County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Laurens County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Laurens County amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018. See Laurens County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45945-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Laurens County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Laurens County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Laurens County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Laurens County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Laurens County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; and Baron & Budd, P.C.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Laurens County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Laurens County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Laurens County filed its original complaint on July 10, 2018. See Laurens County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45945-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Laurens County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF

No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Laurens County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Laurens County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Laurens County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Laurens County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Laurens County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Laurens County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Laurens County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Laurens County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, et al., No. 1:18-op-45945-DAP; and Dean v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45163-DAP. Laurens County's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were "duplicative of and improperly split" from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Laurens County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Laurens County filed its original complaint on July 10, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Laurens County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45945-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Laurens County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Laurens County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Laurens County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Laurens County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

761. City of Jersey City, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45948-DAP: Plaintiff Jersey City, New Jersey

Jersey City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Jersey City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Jersey City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Jersey City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Jersey City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Jersey City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Jersey City filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 13, 2018. See City of Jersey City, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45948-DAP, ECF No. 4. Jersey City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Jersey City elected not to do so. Instead, Jersey City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Jersey City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Jersey City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Jersey City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Jersey City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Jersey City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Jersey City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Jersey City began receiving those services on July 1, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Jersey City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Jersey City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Jersey City's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Jersey City filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018. See City of Jersey City, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45948-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Jersey City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1

(Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Jersey City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Jersey City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Jersey City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Jersey City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Jersey law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Jersey City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Jersey law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Jersey City, a municipality in New Jersey, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Jersey City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Jersey City filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Jersey City, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45948-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Jersey City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Jersey City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Jersey City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Jersey City, a municipality in New Jersey, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

762. City of New Albany, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45949-DAP: Plaintiff New Albany City, Mississippi

New Albany City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. New Albany City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. New Albany City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, New Albany City's motion should be denied due to futility, as New Albany City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. New Albany City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, New Albany City amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018. See City of New Albany, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45949-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, New Albany City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. New Albany City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. New Albany City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. New Albany City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. New Albany City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. New Albany City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. New Albany City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to

New Albany City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for New Albany City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for New Albany City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. New Albany City filed its original complaint on July 12, 2018. See City of New Albany, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45949-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, New Albany City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating New Albany City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of New Albany City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by New Albany City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and New Albany City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, New Albany City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to New Albany City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified New Albany City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but New Albany City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, New Albany City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. New Albany City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against New Albany City’s potential claims against them. New Albany City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But New Albany City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. New Albany City, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for New Albany City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. New Albany City filed its amended complaint on March 11, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of New Albany, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45949-DAP, ECF No. 5. It is therefore indisputable that New Albany City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. New Albany City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. New Albany City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. New Albany City, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

763. City of Greenwood, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45950-DAP: Plaintiff Greenwood City, Mississippi

Greenwood City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Greenwood City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Greenwood City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Greenwood City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Greenwood City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Greenwood City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Greenwood City amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018. See City of Greenwood, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45950-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Greenwood City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Greenwood City's deadline to amend was in 2019. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Greenwood City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

764. City of Melrose, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45951-DAP: Plaintiff Melrose City, Massachusetts

Melrose City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Melrose City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Melrose City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Melrose City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Melrose City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Melrose City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Melrose City amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018. See City of Melrose, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45951-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Melrose City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Melrose City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Melrose City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Melrose City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Melrose City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Melrose City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Melrose City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part

(0.003% market share for Melrose City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Melrose City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Melrose City filed its original complaint on July 6, 2018. See City of Melrose, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45951-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Melrose City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Melrose City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Melrose City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Melrose City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Melrose City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Melrose City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Melrose City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Melrose City's potential claims against them. Melrose City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Melrose City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Melrose City filed its original complaint on July 6, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Melrose, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45951-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Melrose City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Melrose City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Melrose City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Melrose City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Melrose City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 6, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Melrose City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

765. Town of Chelmsford, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45952-DAP: Plaintiff Chelmsford Town, Massachusetts

Chelmsford Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chelmsford Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chelmsford Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chelmsford Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Chelmsford Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chelmsford Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Chelmsford Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018. See Town of Chelmsford, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45952-DAP, ECF No. 16. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Chelmsford Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Chelmsford Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Chelmsford Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Chelmsford Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Chelmsford Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Chelmsford Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Chelmsford Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chelmsford Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Chelmsford Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.17% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chelmsford Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Chelmsford Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Chelmsford Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Chelmsford Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Chelmsford Town filed its original complaint on July 6, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Chelmsford, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No.

1:18-op-45952-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Chelmsford Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Chelmsford Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Chelmsford Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Chelmsford Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Chelmsford Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 6, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chelmsford Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

766. Gulf County, Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45953-DAP: Plaintiff Gulf County, Florida

Gulf County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Gulf County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Gulf County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Gulf County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Gulf County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Gulf County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Gulf County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018. See Gulf County, Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45953-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Gulf County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Gulf County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Gulf County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Gulf County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Gulf County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A., and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Gulf County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Gulf County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Gulf County filed its original complaint on July 11, 2018. See Gulf County, Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45953-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Gulf County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Gulf County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Gulf County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Gulf County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Gulf County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Gulf County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Gulf County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Gulf County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Gulf County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Gulf County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Gulf County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Gulf County’s potential claims against them. Gulf County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Gulf County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Gulf County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Gulf County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Gulf County filed its original complaint on July 11, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Gulf County, Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45953-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Gulf County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Gulf County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Gulf County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Gulf County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Gulf County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 11, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.”

(cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Gulf County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

767. Whatcom County v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45954-DAP: Plaintiff Whatcom County, Washington

Whatcom County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Whatcom County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Whatcom County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Whatcom County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Whatcom County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Whatcom County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Whatcom County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018, as well as on May 28, 2019 and December 23, 2020. See Whatcom County v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45954-DAP, ECF Nos. 21, 22, 24. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Whatcom County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Whatcom County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Whatcom County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Whatcom County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See

Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Whatcom County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.15% market share for Whatcom County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Whatcom County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Whatcom County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.23% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Whatcom County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Whatcom County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Whatcom County, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Whatcom County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Whatcom County filed its original complaint on June 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Whatcom County v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45954-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Whatcom County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Whatcom County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Whatcom County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Whatcom County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Whatcom County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 27, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Whatcom County, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

768. Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45955-DAP: Plaintiff Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation, Washington

Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation amended its complaint on August 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018, as well as on January 20, 2021. See Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45955-DAP, ECF Nos. 25, 30. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above.

Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation filed its original complaint on July 19, 2018, but waited until September 12, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—six years later. See Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45955-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 12, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation filed its original complaint on July 19, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45955-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lummi Tribe of the Lummi Reservation, a native tribe in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

769. Conecuh County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45957-DAP: Plaintiff Conecuh County, Alabama

Conecuh County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Conecuh County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Conecuh County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Conecuh County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Conecuh County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Conecuh County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Conecuh County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018. See Conecuh County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45957-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Conecuh County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Conecuh County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Conecuh County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Conecuh County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Conecuh County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Conecuh County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Conecuh County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Conecuh County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Conecuh County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Conecuh County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Conecuh County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.14% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Conecuh County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Conecuh County filed its original complaint on July 12, 2018. See Conecuh County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45957-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Conecuh County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Conecuh County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Conecuh County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Conecuh County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Conecuh County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Conecuh County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Conecuh County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Conecuh County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Conecuh County filed its original complaint on July 12, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants.

See Conecuh County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45957-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Conecuh County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Conecuh County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Conecuh County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Conecuh County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Conecuh County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 12, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Conecuh County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it "is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate," and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Conecuh County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

770. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45959-DAP: Plaintiff Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians, Minnesota

Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians' untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians' motion should be denied due to futility, as Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians amended its complaint on March 10, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 13, 2018, as well as on August 13, 2019. See Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45959-DAP, ECF Nos. 7, 13. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians' deadline to amend was in 2019. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians' lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians’ geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians filed its original complaint on July 23, 2018. See Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians v.

Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45959-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians’ case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians’ document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Minnesota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians’ delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Minnesota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians, a native tribe in Minnesota, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. 771. Village of Herkimer, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45964-DAP: Plaintiff Herkimer Village, New York

Herkimer Village's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Herkimer Village failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Herkimer Village also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Herkimer Village's motion should be denied due to futility, as Herkimer Village’s request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

772. Jackson County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45965-DAP: Plaintiff Jackson County, Missouri

Jackson County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Jackson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed

773. City of Covington, Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45967-DAP: Plaintiff Covington City, Kentucky

Covington City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Covington City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Covington City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Covington City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Covington City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Covington City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Covington City amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 14, 2018. *See City of Covington, Kentucky v. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Covington City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Covington City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Covington City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Covington City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Covington City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Covington City filed its original complaint on July 24, 2018. See City of Covington, Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45967-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Covington City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Covington City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Covington City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Covington City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Covington City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kentucky law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Covington City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kentucky law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Covington City, a municipality in Kentucky, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Covington City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Covington City filed its original complaint on July 24, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Covington, Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45967-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Covington City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Covington City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Covington City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Covington City, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

774. City of Meridian v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45969-DAP: Plaintiff Meridian City, Mississippi

Meridian City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Meridian City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Meridian City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Meridian City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Meridian City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Meridian City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Meridian City amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 14, 2018. See City of Meridian v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45969-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Meridian City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Meridian City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Meridian City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Meridian City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Meridian City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Meridian City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Meridian City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

units shipped to Meridian City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.19% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Meridian City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Meridian City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Meridian City filed its original complaint on July 24, 2018, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—a year and half later. See City of Meridian v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45969-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Meridian City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Meridian City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Meridian City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Meridian City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Meridian City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Meridian City, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Meridian City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Meridian City filed its amended complaint on March 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Meridian v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45969-DAP, ECF No. 8. It is therefore indisputable that Meridian City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Meridian City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Meridian City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Meridian City, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Polk County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Polk County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Polk County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Polk County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Polk County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Polk County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Polk County filed its original complaint on May 23, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 14, 2018. See Polk County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45970-DAP, ECF No. 5. Polk County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Polk County elected not to do so. Instead, Polk County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Polk County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Polk County filed its original complaint on May 23, 2018. See Polk County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45970-DAP, ECF No. 2. Despite filing its case years ago, Polk County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Polk County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Polk County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Polk County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Polk County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Polk County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Polk County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Polk County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Polk County filed its original complaint on May 23, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Polk County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45970-DAP, ECF No. 2. Even assuming arguendo that Polk County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 23, 2022. Polk County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Polk County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Polk County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Polk County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on May 23, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Polk County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

776. County of Eaton v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45971-DAP: Plaintiff Eaton County, Michigan

Eaton County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Eaton County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Eaton County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Eaton County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Eaton County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Moreover, Eaton County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 15, 2018. See County of Eaton v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45971-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Eaton County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Eaton County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Eaton County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Eaton County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Eaton County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Eaton County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Eaton County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Eaton County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Eaton County filed its original complaint on July 25, 2018, but waited until January 10, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—a year and a half later. See County of Eaton v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45971-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: January 10, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Eaton County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. 777. Waukesha County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45978-DAP: Plaintiff Waukesha County, Wisconsin

Waukesha County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Waukesha County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Waukesha County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Waukesha County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Waukesha County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Waukesha County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Waukesha County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Waukesha County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Waukesha County, a municipality in Wisconsin, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Waukesha County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Waukesha County filed its original complaint on July 7, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants.

Waukesha County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Waukesha County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Waukesha County, a municipality in Wisconsin, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

778. Cherokee County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45979-DAP: Plaintiff Cherokee County, North Carolina

Cherokee County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cherokee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cherokee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cherokee County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Cherokee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cherokee County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above.

Moreover, Cherokee County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 17, 2018. See Cherokee County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45979-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cherokee County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Cherokee County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Cherokee County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cherokee County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Cherokee County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Cherokee County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Cherokee County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Cherokee County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Cherokee County filed its original complaint on July 30, 2018, but waited until May 17, 2021 to implement a litigation hold—almost three years later. See Cherokee County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45979-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: May 17, 2021). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Cherokee County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Cherokee County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Cherokee County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Cherokee County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Cherokee County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Cherokee County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Cherokee County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Cherokee County filed its original complaint on July 30, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Cherokee County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45979-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Cherokee County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Cherokee County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Cherokee County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Cherokee County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

779. Island County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45982-DAP: Plaintiff Island County, Washington

Island County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Island County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Island County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Island County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Island County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Island County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Island County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 17, 2018, as well as on May 28, 2019 and December 22, 2020. See Island County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45982-DAP, ECF Nos. 22, 25, 27. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Island County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Island County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Island County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Island County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704

F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Island County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Island County, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Island County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Island County filed its original complaint on August 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Island County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45982-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Island County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Island County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Island County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Island County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Island County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on August 1, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Island County, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

780. Allamakee County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45983-DAP: Plaintiff Allamakee County, Iowa

Allamakee County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Allamakee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Allamakee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Allamakee County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Allamakee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Allamakee County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Allamakee County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 17, 2018. See Allamakee County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45983-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Allamakee County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Allamakee County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Allamakee County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Allamakee County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Allamakee County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Allamakee County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Allamakee County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Allamakee County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Allamakee County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Allamakee County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Allamakee County's potential claims against them. Allamakee County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Iowa law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Allamakee County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Iowa law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Allamakee County, a municipality in Iowa, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Allamakee County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Allamakee County filed its original complaint on August 2, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Allamakee County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45983-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Allamakee County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Allamakee County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Allamakee County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Allamakee County, a municipality in Iowa, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

781. Pasquotank County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45986-DAP: Plaintiff Pasquotank County, North Carolin

Pasquotank County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pasquotank County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pasquotank County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pasquotank County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Pasquotank County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pasquotank County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pasquotank County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 20, 2018. See Pasquotank County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45986-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pasquotank County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Pasquotank County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Pasquotank County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pasquotank County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704

F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Pasquotank County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Pasquotank County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Pasquotank County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Pasquotank County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Pasquotank County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pasquotank County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Pasquotank County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.28% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pasquotank County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Pasquotank County filed its original complaint on July 30, 2018. See Pasquotank County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45986-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Pasquotank County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Pasquotank County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Pasquotank County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Pasquotank County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Pasquotank County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pasquotank County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pasquotank County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Pasquotank County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Pasquotank County filed its original complaint on July 30, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Pasquotank County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45986-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Pasquotank County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Pasquotank County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Pasquotank County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pasquotank County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

782. St. John the Baptist Parish v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45987-DAP: Plaintiff St. John The Baptist Parish, Louisiana

St. John The Baptist Parish's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. John The Baptist Parish failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. John The Baptist Parish also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. John The Baptist Parish's motion should be denied due to futility, as St. John The Baptist Parish does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. St. John The Baptist Parish was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, St. John The Baptist Parish amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 20, 2018. See St. John the Baptist Parish v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45987-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, St. John The Baptist Parish declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. St. John The Baptist Parish's deadline to amend was in 2019. St. John The Baptist Parish waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. St. John The Baptist Parish's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. St. John The Baptist Parish cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. St. John The Baptist Parish, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. (0.10% market share for St. John The Baptist Parish). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. John The Baptist Parish to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

units shipped to St. John The Baptist Parish's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.32% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. John The Baptist Parish to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Louisiana law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But St. John The Baptist Parish's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Louisiana law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. St. John The Baptist Parish, a municipality in Louisiana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for St. John The Baptist Parish's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. St. John The Baptist Parish filed its original complaint on July 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See St. John the Baptist Parish v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45987-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that St. John The Baptist Parish knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. St. John The Baptist Parish's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. St. John The Baptist Parish’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Louisiana, public-nuisance claims are subject to a one-year limitations period. St. John The Baptist Parish’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because St. John The Baptist Parish sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 27, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. John The Baptist Parish, a municipality in Louisiana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

783. Walworth County Wisconsin v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45988-DAP: Plaintiff Walworth County, Wisconsin

Walworth County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Walworth County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Walworth County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Walworth County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Walworth County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Walworth County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Walworth County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 20, 2018. See Walworth County Wisconsin v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45988-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Walworth County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Walworth County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Walworth County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Walworth County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Walworth County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Walworth County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Walworth County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Walworth County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.11% market share for Walworth County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Walworth County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Walworth County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.47% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Walworth County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Walworth County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Walworth County, a municipality in Wisconsin, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Walworth County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Walworth County filed its original complaint on August 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Walworth County Wisconsin v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45988-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Walworth County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Walworth County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Walworth County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Walworth County, a municipality in Wisconsin, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

784. Essex County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45989-DAP: Plaintiff Essex County, New Jersey

Essex County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Essex County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Essex County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Essex County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Essex County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Essex County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Essex County filed its original complaint on August 1, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 20, 2018. See Essex County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45989-DAP, ECF No. 3. Essex County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Essex County elected not to do so. Instead, Essex County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Essex County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Essex County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.14% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Essex County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Essex County filed its original complaint on August 1, 2018. See Essex County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45989-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Essex County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Essex County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Essex County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Essex County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Essex County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Jersey law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Essex County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Jersey law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Essex County, a municipality in New Jersey, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Essex County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Essex County filed its original complaint on August 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Essex County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45989-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Essex County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Essex County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Essex County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Essex County, a municipality in New Jersey, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

785. Town of Sturbridge v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45990-DAP: Plaintiff Sturbridge Town, Massachusetts

Sturbridge Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sturbridge Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sturbridge Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sturbridge Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sturbridge Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sturbridge Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sturbridge Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 20, 2018. See Town of Sturbridge v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45990-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sturbridge Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sturbridge Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Sturbridge Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sturbridge Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Sturbridge Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Sturbridge Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Sturbridge Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Sturbridge Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Sturbridge Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

support a finding of good cause for Sturbridge Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sturbridge Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sturbridge Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sturbridge Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sturbridge Town filed its original complaint on July 26, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Town of Sturbridge v. Sturbridge Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Sturbridge Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Sturbridge Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 26, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

786. Lenoir County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45991-DAP: Plaintiff Lenoir County, North Carolina

Lenoir County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lenoir County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lenoir County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lenoir County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lenoir County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lenoir County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lenoir County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. 787. South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45998-DAP: Plaintiff South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust, Texas

South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust's motion should be denied due to futility, as South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on August 23, 2018. *See South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust v. South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust elected not to do so. South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Texas law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBM's ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Texas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust, a third party payor in Texas, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust filed its original complaint on August 23, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45998-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on August 23, 2022. South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. South Central UFCW Unions and Employers Health & Welfare Trust, a third party payor in Texas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

788. City of Garfield Heights v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45999-DAP: Plaintiff Garfield Heights City, Ohio

Garfield Heights City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Garfield Heights City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Garfield Heights City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Garfield Heights City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Garfield Heights City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Garfield Heights City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Garfield Heights City first amended its complaint on August 2, 2018. See City of Garfield Heights v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45999-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Garfield Heights City amended its complaint again on March 18, 2019. See City of Garfield Heights v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45999-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Garfield Heights City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Garfield Heights City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Garfield Heights City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Garfield Heights City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Furthermore, in 2023, Garfield Heights City filed a separate complaint in this MDL asserting new claims for public nuisance and negligence against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company, n/k/a Evernorth Health, Inc.; Merck-Medco, n/k/a Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; OptumRx, Inc.; and other defendants. See Cuyahoga County et al. v. Mylan Pharms., Inc. et al., No. 1:23-op-45003 (N.D. Ohio), ECF No. 1. Garfield Heights City offers no good cause for its failure to bring its proposed claims against all PBMs in the 2023 case, which is still pending. In addition, Garfield Heights City’s improper claim-splitting between these two separate cases in the MDL should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (affirming dismissal for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Garfield Heights City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Garfield Heights City—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Garfield Heights City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”);

Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Garfield Heights City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for Garfield Heights City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Garfield Heights City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Garfield Heights City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.45% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Garfield Heights City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Garfield Heights City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Garfield Heights City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Garfield Heights City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Garfield Heights City's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Garfield Heights City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Garfield Heights City filed its second amended complaint on March 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Garfield Heights v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45999-DAP, ECF No. 7. It is therefore indisputable that Garfield Heights City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Garfield Heights City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Garfield Heights City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Garfield Heights City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

789. Town of South Hadley v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46000-DAP: Plaintiff South Hadley Town, Massachusetts

South Hadley Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. South Hadley Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. South Hadley Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, South Hadley Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as South Hadley Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. South Hadley Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, South Hadley Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 24, 2018. See Town of South Hadley v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46000-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, South Hadley Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. South Hadley Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. South Hadley Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. South Hadley Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704

F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. South Hadley Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. South Hadley Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. South Hadley Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to South Hadley Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for South Hadley Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for South Hadley Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But South Hadley Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. South Hadley Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for South Hadley Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. South Hadley Town filed its original complaint on July 9, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of South Hadley v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46000-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that South Hadley Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. South Hadley Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. South Hadley Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. South Hadley Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because South Hadley Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on July 9, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. South Hadley Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

790. Town of Sheffield, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46001-DAP: Plaintiff Sheffield Town, Massachusetts

Sheffield Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheffield Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheffield Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheffield Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheffield Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheffield Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheffield Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 24, 2018. See Town of Sheffield, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46001-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheffield Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheffield Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheffield Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheffield Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Sheffield Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Sheffield Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Sheffield Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Sheffield Town's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Sheffield Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts' PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts' PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Sheffield Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts' PBM "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheffield Town filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018. See Town of Sheffield, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46001-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheffield Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Sheffield Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheffield Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheffield Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheffield Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheffield Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheffield Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sheffield Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sheffield Town filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Sheffield, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46001-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sheffield Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Sheffield Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sheffield Town’s request for leave to amend to add a

RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Sheffield Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Sheffield Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on June 28, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheffield Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

791. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46003-DAP: Plaintiff Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada, Nevada

Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada amended its complaint on August 12, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46003-DAP, ECF No. 22. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.09% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada filed its original complaint on August 27, 2018. See Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46003-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos.

232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Nevada law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Nevada law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada, a native tribe in Nevada, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada filed its original complaint on August 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46003-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Nevada, public-nuisance claims are subject to a one-year limitations period. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on August 27, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ely Shoshone Tribe of Nevada, a native tribe in Nevada, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

792. Town of Westford, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46007-DAP: Plaintiff Westford Town, Massachusetts

Westford Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Westford Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Westford Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Westford Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Westford Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Westford Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Westford Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 29, 2018. See Town of Westford, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46007-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Westford Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Westford Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Westford Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Westford Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Westford Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Westford Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Westford Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Westford Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Westford Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

a finding of good cause for Westford Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Westford Town filed its original complaint on June 29, 2018. See Town of Westford, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46007-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Westford Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Westford Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Westford Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Westford Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Westford Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Westford Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Westford Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Westford Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Westford Town filed its original complaint on June 29, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Westford, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46007-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Westford Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Westford Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Westford Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Westford Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

793. Kittitas County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46008-DAP: Plaintiff Kittitas County, Washington

Kittitas County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Kittitas County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Kittitas County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Kittitas County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Kittitas County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Kittitas County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Kittitas County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 29, 2018, as well as on May 28, 2019 and December 24, 2020. See Kittitas County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46008-DAP, ECF Nos. 22, 25, 28. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Kittitas County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Kittitas County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Kittitas County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Kittitas County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Kittitas County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Kittitas County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kittitas County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Kittitas County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.20% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kittitas County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Kittitas County filed its original complaint on August 9, 2018. See Kittitas County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46008-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Kittitas County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Kittitas County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Kittitas County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Kittitas County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Walla Walla County, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

795. City of North Olmsted v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46012-DAP: Plaintiff North Olmsted City, Ohio

North Olmsted City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. North Olmsted City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. North Olmsted City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, North Olmsted City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as North Olmsted City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. North Olmsted City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, North Olmsted City amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 29, 2018. See City of North Olmsted v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46012-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, North Olmsted City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. North Olmsted City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. North Olmsted City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. North Olmsted City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Furthermore, in 2023, North Olmsted City filed a separate complaint in this MDL asserting new claims for public nuisance and negligence against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company, n/k/a Evernorth Health, Inc.; Merck-Medco, n/k/a Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; OptumRx, Inc.; and other defendants. See Cuyahoga County et al. v. Mylan Pharms., Inc. et al., No. 1:23-op-45003 (N.D. Ohio), ECF No. 1. North Olmsted City offers no good cause for its failure to bring its proposed claims against all PBMs in the 2023 case, which is still pending. In addition, North Olmsted City’s improper claim-splitting between these two separate cases in the MDL should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (affirming dismissal for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. North Olmsted City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been
